Victim Shoots Rapist to Death

ST. JOSEPH, MO. (AP) - A 19-year-old mother early today shot and killed a man who entered her home at Sugar Lake and raped her after threatening her and her 2-year-old son with a pistol, Buchanan County authorities reported.

The Buchanan County sheriff's office identified the dead man as Robert Edward Bennett, 23, of Atchison, Kan.

Pastsy Ann Goodpasture told authorities the man broke into her home near Rushville. She said he threatened her and the boy, and then raped her. She told police she grabbed the pistol and shot the man in the chest. He fled from the home and collapsed in a roadway where he died.

The woman said the man, a Negro, had been at her home several times previously to inspect a motor that her husband had for sale.

The husband, Henry Goodpasture, who is employed in the Fairfax area of Kansas City, arrived home from work about 20 minutes after the shooting.

Lake Ozark Liquor by Drink Vote Barred

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Atty. Gen. Norman H. Anderson ruled today the city of Lake Ozark, which has less than 500 inhabitants, may not hold an election on sale of liquor by the drink.

The 1967 legislature enacted a law allowing drink sales at large resorts and restaurants.

But Anderson said other laws limit liquor by the drink elections to cities of over 500 population.

In another opinion the attorney general held no neptism or conflict of interest is involved when a prosecuting attorney hires a county judge's daughter as his secretary.

Bell City School Robbed

BELL CITY -- The Bell City high school was broken into over the weekend, and $290 in cash taken from the two administrative offices.

How the thief or thieves entered has not been learned, according to Deputy Sheriff Cecil Hicks. No doors were pried open or glass broken.

The money was obtained by prying open a cabinet in the superintendent's office, where $105 was taken, and $185 from the principal's office.

Nothing else in the two offices was disturbed.

The loss was discovered Monday morning.

Strangling Inquest Opens

ST. LOUIS (AP) - The superintendent of the St. Louis State School and Hospital told a coroner's inquest today more employes would help diminish the possibility of circumstances that led to the strangulation deaths of three inmates.

Coroner Raymond Harris asked Dr. Cecil G. Baker of the hospital how many employes were on duty in Donnelly Hall last Wednesday morning when the inmates were strangled.

Dr. Baker told the coroner three people - two women and a man - were working the hall. He added that at least six people were needed in the building and that "more male employes would help." He cited low salaries as a reason the hospital has problems in keeping personnel.

The three inmates were found strangled with pieces of a bedsheet. County police said four inmates admitted strangling the young men and said they planned to kill more, but got tired and quit.

Marilyn Kruger, a registered nurse who works on the day shift at Donnelly Hall, told the inquest she found one of the victims and notified authorities. She said four or five more employes would make it possible for the staff to give adequate supervision.

In reply to questions, the nurse and Baker said there also were problems with six deviation. Both said additional personnel would help control that problem, too. The nurse said she felt additional recreational facilities were needed as the patients had too much idle time.

A woman, sho told the inquest she had a son at Donnelly Hall, testified that her son told her he and another boy tried to attract the attention of attendants Wednesday morning, but they were sent back to bed by a nurse.

Wright Quits as Director

PORTAGEVILLE -- A. W. Wright, director of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation, has submitted his resignation as director of the DAEOC board of directors.

The resignation will become effective as soon as the board has employed a new director.

Wright said his plans are indefinite but that he might continue to work in some phase of the poverty program.

Prior to coming to DAEOC, he was superintendent of schools at Illmo-Scott City 20 years, retiring in the spring of 1967. He has been DAEOC director since June.

Wright succeeded Bill Clare as director. Clare resigned to take a position with a school system to Illinois.

Prior to Clare the position of director was filled by acting co-directors, Lloyd Phillips and William Graves, who served in the capacity after DAEOC's first director, Earl Williams of Anniston, was discharged by the DAEOC board in August of 1966.

Phillips and Graves were discharged by the board last spring following a bitter dispute between the Kansas City regional Office of Economic Opportunity and the DAEOC board.

The director's salary is $12,000 a year.

Downtown Merchants Draft Constitution

A new constitution was drafted for the Downtown Merchants Association by five of its members in a special meeting last night in the Chamber of Commerce Office.

Details of the new constitution will be explained by five teams, composed of two merchants each, to each downtown merchant in the next 10 days. Team members will meet at 10 a.m. tomorrow at Luber's Restaurant to decide which merchants each team will visit.

The objective of the association was defined in the meeting last night. It is to promote the downtown area of Sikeston and develop good will in the Sikeston trade area.

Some of the rules set forth in the constitution include that all members shall be downtown merchants, that the Chamber of Commerce shall work cooperatively with the group on all promotions, that members shall cooperate on major promotions and that merchants shall urge employes to use off street parking.

Other rules dealt with the term of officers and the dues of members.

A general membership meeting will be held for the election of officers after all merchants are visited and the new constitution is explained, Richard Pinkerton, Chamber of Commerce manager said today.

Constitution committee members are Stanley Bush, Z. E. McAmis, Ed Rider, Venson "Shiek" Jones and Raymond Wright.

TVA Scores Victory In Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP)- The Tennessee Valley Authority won a major victory over a private power supplier, Kentucky Utilities, in the Supreme Court today.

The net result of the 6-1 decision is to authorize supply of TVA power to two small villages in Tennessee. But the issues go deeper than that, and the ruling, by Justice Hugo L. Black, firmly establishes TVA's right to determine the precise regions it may service under congressional authority.

Today's action undoubtedly will set the pattern for other cases in lower courts that deal similarly with extension of TVA power along its primary service area.

The ruling involved interpretation of an important amendment to the Tennessee Valley Authority Act in 1959. While authorizing TVA to raise money for expansion and development through the sale of bonds, Congress established some service rules.

TVA was allowed to supply power to the area for which it was the "primary" source on July 1, 1957. At the same time, it was barred from supplying municipalities within a five-mile peripheral area who were receiving power from private sources.

TVA contended Congress had left it to the TVA board to define exactly what was meant by the "primary" and the "peripheral" areas.

New Patrol Headquarters Sought

Troop E Building Would Be Relocated

Special to Daily Standard

JEFFERSON CITY -- A request for $436,000 in state funds to build a new headquarters for troop E of the Missouri State Highway Patrol was made Monday in a capital improvements hearing before the house appropriations committee.

Col. E. I. "Mike" Hockaday, superintendent of the patrol, said today the present facility serving highway patrolmen in Southeast Missouri near Poplar Bluff has been outgrown.

When meetings are held there, girls on the staff are required to leave to make room for patrolmen, he said.

The present facility has 2,700 square feet. The new building is designed for 14,000 square feet, Hockaday said.

Another reason for the request is the fact the present facility at the outskirts of Poplar Bluff will be bypassed by highway 67 when it is extended in dual lanes to the south, he said.

It probably will be near the end of the 60-day special legislative session convened Friday before the outcome on the request is known as most appropriations bills are usually the last considered, Hockaday said.

If the money is allocated, the new headquarters building would be located on one of the most traveled highways in the troop E area. For the greatest efficiency of the office it should be located more centrally according to population and traffic in the area, Hockaday said.

Traffic and population factors apparently would weigh more heavily in locating the new office than a purely geographical center.

The Troop E area is bounded on the south by the Arkansas border, on the west by Ripley and Iron counties, on the north by Iron and Perry counties and on the east by the Mississippi river.

Hockaday also requested a $2 million allocation yesterday for the construction of a new State Highway Patrol Training Academy in Jefferson City. It would be an 80,000 square foot structure capable of training 120 men.

A new academy is needed to replace the one operating in Rolla, which has a 60-man training capacity.

Several police departments, including Sikeston, send men to the academy for training.

Some of the requests for training by police departments have to be delayed because of the space limitations and the need to train highway patrolmen at the academy.

Fiery Blast Follows Seaport Collision

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The freighter Christiana smashed into a string of gasoline-laden barges in the Houston Ship Channel today turning the water into a blazing inferno as the volatile fuel exploded in sheets of flame.

Two American tourists, the captain's wife and 3-year-old daughter, and 27 officers and crewmen scrambled into the ship's lifeboats and fled through the fiery waters. State police said they had no reports of serious injuries.

The collision occurred about 12:30 a.m. just south of a highway tunnel between the suburbs of Baytown and La Porte, which is 30 miles southeast of Houston.

The Christiane, a 372-foot craft of Liberian registry owned by Christiane Shipping Co. of Bermuda, was outbound toward Port Arthur, Tex., when it struck the barges being pushed by the tugboat Barbara Waxler.

One barge was empty but the other two bore 30,000 barrels of high octane gasoline which exploded, spraying fire across the chilly waters of Upper Galveston Bay.

Help was close by because rescue units along the heavily industralized waterway were still dealing with an explosion and fire that broke out two hours earlier and 12 miles upstream at a Shell Chemical Co. plant.

Israel Says Soviets Given Yugoslav Base

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - The Israeli newspaper Maariy reported today that Yugoslavia has given the Russians a naval base at the Adriatic port of Split to help support the Egyptian regime of President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

In Belgrade, a spokesman for the Yugoslav Foreign Ministry said the report is "without any foundation."

The paper's Paris correspondent said reliable foreign sources reported the agreement between President Tito and Soviet leaders has been kept secret, but observers have noted that Soviet warships sail regularly between Split and Eygptian ports.

The agreement was reached shortly before the Eygptians sank the Israeli destroyer Elath with a Soviet-built missile beat on Oct. 21, the paper said.

Maariy said its scources reported many Yugoslav leaders were critical of Tito's move, fearing it might threaten their independence from the Soviet Union.

At least three Soviet warships and submarines now dock regularly at Split, the report said, and housing and clubs have been opened for Soviet seamen.

Meanwhile, in the Gaza Strip near El Arish Monday night, an Israeli tank truck ran over an antivehicle mine, the Israeli army said the Tel Aviv. The blast damaged the truck and injured its driver, and a search was on today for the saboteurs responsible.

The Israeli army denied claims from Damascus by El Fatah terrorists that their units "heavily damaged" an Israeli potassium plant west of the Dead Sea Jan. 7. A spokesman said the plant had not been attacked.

Buses Collide, 5 Hurt

CHARLESTON -- One bus driver and four school children were injured, when two school buses collided on highway K, about four miles northeast of Charleston, today at 7:30 a.m.

Both buses were traveling east on the Big Lake Road, east of highway 77, when a 1967 bus owned by the Charleston R-1 district, and driven by Clyde Sanders, 64, Charleston, stopped to pick up children.

A second school bus, a 1967 Chevrolet, belonging to St. Henry's school, Charleston, driven by Delber Zoellner, 47, Charleston, did not see the first bus because of fog until he came close. He applied his brakes and his vehicle crashed into the rear of the other bus on the icy road.

Injured in the Charleston R-1 bus was the driver, cuts on his head, and a passenger, Ruby Rogers, 16, Charleston, possible concussion. Both of the injured were taken to Missouri Delta Community hospital in Sikeston.

In the St. Henry's Catholic school bus, the injured were passengers, from Charleston - Stephen Scheffer, 10, minor face cuts; Mary Striker, 9, cuts on her face, and David Barley, 13, minor cuts and teeth knocked out. All injured in this bus were treated in a Charleston clinic.

The highway patrol investigated but made no arrests.

At 8 a.m. today on route J, five miles southwest of Hayti, a two-car collision sent two men to the Pemiscot Memorial hospital in Hayti.

A 1961 Chevrolet, driven by Curtis Tipler, 36, Steele, was struck by a 1964 Chevrolet, driven by Robert Vaughn, 17, Steele, when the Vaughn car crossed over the center line and sideswiped the Tipler car.

Tipler received cuts on his face, and Vaughn a broken nose and face cuts.

Vaughn was given a summons for being on the wrong side of the road.

Both drivers escaped injury when two cars collided at 10:30 a.m. Monday on highway 61, two miles north of Marston.

A 1953 Chevrolet, driven by Roy Tillmon, 41, Marston, attemped to make a left turn, when his car was struck in the rear by a 1968 Buick, driven by Lawrence Hollenbeck, 63, Sikeston, the highway patrol reported.

Hatfield Speaker For Lincoln Day

KANSAS CITY (AP) - Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., will speak at the 68th Missouri Lincoln Day dinner Feb. 3 in Kansas City.

Speaking at the Republican Women's meeting at 11 a.m. the same day will be Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, Republican candidate for the U. S. Senate from St. Louis.

Lawrence K. Roos, St. Louis County supervisor and Republican candidate for governor, will address the Missouri Association of Republican Editors Feb. 2.

Paul L. Bradshaw of Springfield, president of the Missouri Association of Republicans, said tickets for the dinner are on sale.

Hatfield was keynote speaker and temporary chairman at the 1964 Republican national convention.

$300,000 More Needed for Hospital

The new wing of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital should be completed Feb. 1 and will make the facility "outstanding," Administrator Harold Jones reported to the Rotary club last night at the Rustic Rock Inn.

Jones made a progress report on construction of the new wing and renovation of the old building and appealed for financial assistance.

He said that the improvements will cost $3,100,000 of which $915,500 will be supplied by the federal government with $2,185,000 to be raised locally.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Coleman have contributed $1,130,000 to the undertaking, he said, and an additional $755,000 has been raised by contributions of others. A balance of $300,000 is needed and the hospital administrator urged "gifts from those who desire to help themselves and their families."

Jones said that the 90 beds the new wing provide are "vitally needed" and will be immediately used.

The hospital will have when completed a new, enlarged emergency department, which will provide better care with rooms for families and for police questioning in private; the radiological department will have three diagnostic rooms, special procedures rooms for rapid diagnosis, X-ray and deep therapy, isotope therapy, a complete physical therapy department with exercise areas and a class room for in-service program.

"The fresh air system will be brought up to date throughout the hospital," Jones said.

There will be four major operating rooms instead of two, intensive care space for heart patients and defices to measure brain and muscle damage.

The speaker was introduced by Sharron Pharris.

Gary Estes and David Miller were inducted as members of the club by Lennie Whitworth.

Fred Koch, president of the club, announced that the club was a 200 per cent contributor to the Rotary Foundation, which provides funds for study abroad. This means that the club has contributed $20 per member on the average to the foundation.

Fred Schultz, St. Louis, president of Canvas Products, was a visiting Rotarian. His guest was Jean Torrence, St. Louis, executive vice president of the company.

Charles Green led the singing accompanied by Kay Hawkins at the piano.

Mercury Dips Down to Four

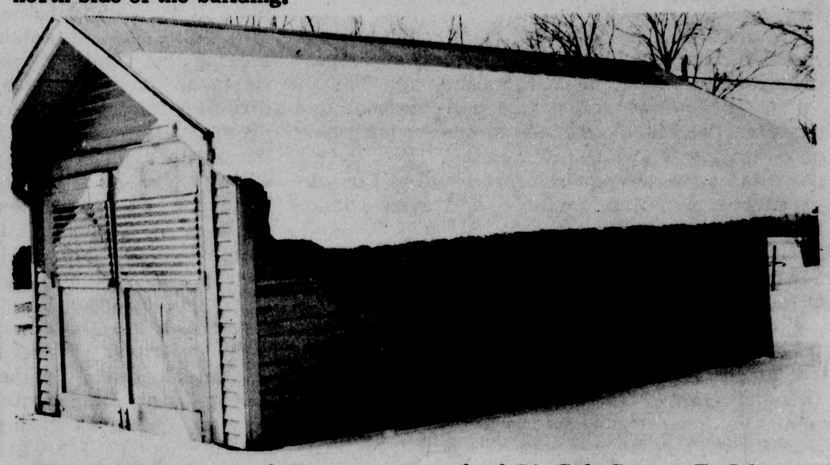

A 36-degree range in temperatures occurred in Sikeston for the 24-hour period preceding 7:30 a.m. today.

The mercury plunged to four overnight after a reading of 40, high enough to make snow slushy, yesterday afternoon.

Fog contributed another hazard to slick streets this morning and a repeat appearance was forecast for tomorrow.

THIS SNOW SLIDE hangs from the garage roof of Lt. Col. George T. Johnson, retired army officer, and Mrs. Johnson at 403 Dorothy St. A four-inch layer of frozen snow is hanging over the roof 30 inches on the north side of the building.

THE SOUTH SIDE of the garage roof of Lt. Col. George T. Johnson, retired, and Mrs. Johnson came in for its share of the snow slide, too. Low temperatures held the slides in position.

Wilson Announces Withdrawal of British Armed Forces in Far East and Persian Gulf

LONDON (AP) - Prime Minister Harold Wilson announced today the withdrawal of all British armed forces from the Far East and the Persian Gulf by the end of 1971.

Unfolding his austerity program before the House of Commons, he also announced a campaign to slash benefits in social welfare.

Although the intention is to leave the Far East by 1971, Wilson said his government was prepared to continue aiding Britain's Commonwealth partners in Southeast Asia through a "joint air defense system for Malaysia and Singapore." Britain will also train personnel to operate the system.

Wilson announced cancellation of a contract to purchase 50 American F111 swing-wing bombers at a cost of $1.02 billion.

The prime minister was grim faced as he rose in the House of Commons to announce details of the Labor government's drive to make Britain solvent.

Princess Margaret was in the gallery sitting near Wilson's wife.

The prime minister said Britain's future foreign role will have to depend on its ability to pay.

"We have to come to terms with our role in the world," Wilson declared.

He told the House Britain will retain its bases in Europe from which forces can be deployed overseas in time of conflict.

The prime minister said the F111 cancellation will mean a saving to this country of $960 million even when penalty costs for cancellation are taken into consideration.

His announcement of the cancellation brought cheers from Labor benches in the House.

Wilson's austerity package was the result of more than 30 hours of tough wrangling within his government over the past week.

"Our purpose in this review is to make devaluation (of the pound) work because until we do, until we are earning year in, year out, substantial surplus on overseas payments, we are unable internally or externally to do all the things which as a nation we would like to do," the prime minister said.

"Abroad it means reassessing our role in the world and realistically limiting commitments and outgoings to our true capacity."

Wilson's statement will be followed by a two-day debate, beginning Wednesday. At its conclusion Thursday will come a vote of confidence in which the government is assured of victory by the Labor party's Commons majority of 85 votes. But Wilson may have to accept the resignation of a minister or two whose favorite projects were treated especially rough.

Regardless of how Labor's left wing may howl at the cuts in the social services, no sizable segment of the party is going to precipitate a revolt which would force the government to face a general election it would be certain to lose. This means that Wilson does not have to call an election for another three years, and he is banking on getting Britain into the black before then, a miracle that would insure the Laborities another lease on the government.

Wilson and the Cabinet decided to speed up the withdrawal from Southeast Asia and the Persian Gulf despite pleas for delay from Washington and the four Commonwealth partners in the region - Malaysia, Singapore, Australia and New Zealand. President Johnson wrote Wilson privately that he did not wish to interfere but felt this was an ill-time moment to announce new plans for withdrawal.

However, the situation in Commons and the Labor Party was in direct contrast to that in the U.S. Congress, where military spending has priority over domestic programs and the latter are the first targets in any economy drive. Cuts in British military spending were the price for the Laborite rank-and-file's acceptance of cutbacks at home.

The new austerity campaign is designed to back up the devaluation of the pound Nov. 18 and is based on the age - old British dictum that the island kingdom "must export or die."

It was drafted against a background of industrial stagnation, with unemployment last reported at 538,000, or 2.3 per cent of the working population.

Wilson's aim is two-fold: to shift $2.4 billion in national resources - money, manpower and nonessentials to production for export by fiscal 1970-71; and to mop up $1.2 billion to $1.4 billion in domestic purchasing power this year through taxation, restrictions on installment buying and possibly forced savings so that money cannot be spent on goods which should be exported.

Devaluation of the pound made British goods potentially competitive on world markets, and the purpose of the new program is to make the goods available for sale abroad.

Jones Tired Of Dirty Capitol

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R- Clayton, said today he was "sick of working in a dirty building."

He told John D. Paulus, director of planning and construction, he could take him out in the hallway and show that the walls are filthy.

"You couldn't rent a building as filthy as this one is in St. Louis," Jones said.

Paulus said his office has only recently discovered a solution that will clean the marble in the Capitol recently. He said some preparation used years ago almost ruined the marble.

But Jones said he wasn't talking about the marble - just the dirt on the painted walls. He offered to give Paulus the $750 allowed him to clean his senatorial office if that would be of any help.

"ALL YOU NEED," he said, "is one man. Give him a sponge and some soap and put him to work."

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Congress' haste to pass legislation to increase salaries of postal and other federal employes and the pay of those serving in the armed services certainly makes political sense.

This is a presidential election year.

President Lyndon B. Johnson is in several different kinds of political trouble and Democrats in Congress running on the same ticket are restless.

But hasty action can backfire.

The publicity mills of the post office department worked overtime to prepare the people on short notice for the postal increase which went into effect Sunday.

The people responded better than the post office department.

Throughout the country there was a shameful lack of preparation in the post office. For days there were no one-cent stamps. As stopgap measures post office patrons spliced their available supplies of fives with stamps costing fractions more than one cent.

Few people have in their possesion any stamp combination which adds up to six cents. Old air mail stamps don't produce it. Neither does a combination of the four-cent stamps formerly used on post cards.

A few screwballs, who saved three-cent stamps from the time not so many years ago when they moved a letter through the mails or who hoarded one-centers from their postcard days may have been the best prepared for the most recent postal increase.

The increase put through so foolishly and so hastily by the politically inspired and politically afraid Congress allowed no time to change the vending machines in the post office lobby. They still spew out five-cent and four-cent stamps.

One of the results is that postal employes must spend more time than desirable in stamping "postage due" on mail lacking the proper postage and mail receivers must shell out more pennies than normally for mail with insufficient postage.

This adds up to an annoyance, irritation and inconvenience for many Americans, including postal employes, which could have been avoided if Congress had shown a little rare common sense, a bit more consideration for their constituents and hadn't been shaking with political tremors.

"A prospect does not normally buy the best value he can afford. He must be sold on the idea of choosing the best. . ."

This is the opinion of a real estate man who has sold thousands of homes.

"The family looking for a new home usually wants something just slightly better than the house they are leaving. They feel a little guilty and unsure about choosing something a great deal better, even though the price may be practically the same."

Salesmen of items ranging from shoes to automobiles have noted the same tendency on the part of buyers to lag behind their means.

It is difficult to sell a fine pair of shoes to a customer who is accustomed to destroying a pair of cheap shoes every few months. Yet, over a period of a year the good shoes would be far less expensive, more comfortable, and more attractive.

"Consumer lag" is especially evident among newly affluent shoppers. Since a large portion of the American public is newly affluent, the problem of helping the consumer to distinguish between value and mere price has become a major function of retail advertising.

It is not easy to convince a new public it is good economics to spend more for quality. The benefits may be long range, intangible, or technical in nature.

The medium used for selling the idea of quality must be one which provides for unlimited presentation of facts, factual comparisons, and sound logic. It must be one in which the public has proven faith.

Because the local newspaper is such a medium, the builders of new and better homes depend upon newspaper advertising as the major means of informing and locating new prospects.

You're driving along a country highway on a beautiful sun-shiny day, and thoroughly enjoying it. Traffic is light, so you're driving right at the speed limit. An experienced driver, you're alert to the road and the world around you.

Suddenly a car pulls out from a side road into your lane of traffic. The road had been partially hidden by the tall corn along the side of the road, and you saw the other car just long enough to know that it hadn't stopped.

You try to stop, but end up slamming into the rear of the other car.

Who's at fault? You, for driving too fast for conditions? Possibly.

The other guy, for failing to yield the right-of-way? Possibly, but there was no stop or yield sign at the intersection.

It would seem that either driver would have a legitimate gripe against being found "negligent" in this accident, but SOMEBODY must be at fault, right?

Right! And it might very well be the local government that had the responsibility for maintenance of that intersection.

In accident cases involving inadequate traffic controls, the courts are increasingly finding municipalities liable for the victims' damages. If it were proved that a stop or yield sign was needed at this intersection, the courts could hold the local government liable.

Municipalities have been found liable in recent accident cases in Washington state, where the judgment was $16,000, in New York state ($67,-500 and $66,000), in Kentucky ($5,000) and in California ($1,000, settled out of court).

In an accident case last year in Wisconsin involving the collision of two cars at an intersection where a stop sign was missing, Rock County was sued for $1,000,000 by one of the victims. Had the county been assessed that amount by the court, its residents would have had to pay the judgment through a bond issue or increased taxes.

The danger that inadequate traffic signs pose to you as a driver is obvious. More subtle is the danger they pose to you as a taxpayer.

It's far cheaper to pay taxes for good traffic signs than it is to pay taxes to settle a large accident liability claim, and it's partially up to you to convince your city, county or state government of this.

FOR THE COPELAND PLAN

This newspaper once again expresses its support of a reapportionment plan that will once again be offered to the Missouri General Assembly by New Madrid County State Representative Fred (Gene) Copeland. The Copeland plan, which will be offered as a place of beginning for the state legislature in its quest for court-acceptable redistricting, includes Texas County -- the home county of U.S. Rep. Richard Ichord of Houston, Mo.

As readers may recall, this newspaper supported Rep. Copeland's previous attempt to include Texas County in the Tenth Congressional District, but the proposal met with defeat, primarily because of the political pressure exerted by would-be Congressional candidates from Southeast Missouri.

Now that the federal court has again thrown out the legislature's attempt to redistrict the state, it appears as if Rep. Copeland's proposal, when the General Assembly convenes this week, may have a better chance.

It deserves that chance.

Although a good many Southeast Missouri politicians raised their eyebrows at Rep. Copeland's plan, it has considerable merit, the most important being that it establishes a precedent for moving the Tenth Congressional District to the west and not to the north. And this is the proper direction for the Tenth to move.

We say this because we are convinced that if the Tenth district ever moves to the north, we will eventually if not quickly, have to include Jefferson County, a semi-metropolitan county south of St. Louis that is predominantly union-dominated and which plays its politics with a curruptness not unlike metropolitan St. Louis. Although Jefferson County is Democratic, it is a different kind of Democratic cat that inhabits those environs. There is no similarity, except in name, between Bootheel Democrats and Jefferson County Democrats.

If the Tenth district is permitted to move west, it will encompass some counties that, while Republican, would hardly constitute a sizeable minority in the heavily-Democratic Tenth district.

The plan has been and will be opposed by Southeast Missouri Democrats who don't like the idea of moving U.S. Rep. Ichord into this district. We hold no brief for Rep. Ichord and certainly are not committed to furthering his political career. If he wins nomination in the Tenth, it will have to be on his own merits and not because he happens to be an incumbent Congressman. In our opinion, Rep. Ichord faces as great a danger in being moved into the Tenth district as the Tenth faces in having him come in.

As we said during the last session of the General Assembly, we hope the Copeland proposal is accepted. Whether it gains approval depends, in the final analysis, on whether Southeast Missouri Democrats choose to look at the future of the Tenth district or whether they are content to accept the expedient as a way to furthering individual political careers.

Missouri experienced a reduction in traffic deaths in 1967 as compared to the previous year. The State had not recorded a decrease of vehicular fatalities over a previous year since 1961.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol reports that the traffic fatality toll for the last year is 1,308. Late deaths resulting from injuries sustained in traffic accidents during the past year will be added to the toll. A total of 1,379 persons died on Missouri streets and highways in 1966 ... a record.

The Highway Patrol's Division of Safety made a brief study of last year's traffic deaths: There were 1,005 traffic fatalities in the rural areas of the State and 303 in urban traffic; The number of pedestrians killed totaled 170 ... ten more than in 1966; Forty - eight persons died in vehicular accidents at railroad crossings. Every month of 1967 recorded at least one or more fatalities at these locations; The number of multiple death accidents decreased from 169 in 1966 to 155 for last year.

The Patrol also found that the first six months of 1967 recorded a lower traffic toll than the last half of the year. There were 594 persons killed in the State from January thru June. During the final six months of the year, 714 lives were lost in Missouri traffic.

Regardless of the improved Missouri traffic toll, the Highway Patrol warned motorists of becoming overconfident. Captain F. W. Shadwell, head of the Patrol's Division of Safety, said, "The publicity given to the improved 1967 traffic death record could be a forerunner of a tragic death toll in the next few weeks. Traffic dangers have not decreased in the least. The driver who becomes overconfident at the wheel is in danger of losing his life."

Devaluation of the British pound will undoubtedly have both an immediate and long range effect on American independent business, the research staff of the National Federation of Independent Business believes.

The immediate affect is the raising of interest rates by Federal Reserve Board action to offset the decline of the pound. A special computer run of the 5,742 respondents to the Federation continuous field survey for the first half of November shows that the average interest rate being paid by independent firms has jumped to 6.8 per cent, up from 6.5 per cent in October and higher than the 6.7 per cent average rate that prevailed in the first and third quarters of the year. In the second quarter there was a dip to 6.6 per cent.

The November interest rate was from data received prior to the Federal Reserve Board action which will undoubtedly further increase the rate. It may also further dampen applications for loans from small business which has dropped from 42 per cent seeking loans the first of the year to 36 per cent.

The long range impact remains to be seen, as with almost a 15 per cent cut in British prices created by the drop in the pound, it is possible that England will become the discount house of the world.

The Federation surveys show that some 22 per cent of the nation's approximately 500,000 smaller manufacturers have been exporting, and about 4 per cent of the same number are also engaged in wholesaling.

Whether or not the lower prices on British goods will cut into this business remains to be seen, as well as the possible impact of cheaper British imports into the U. S. on independent manufacturers' domestic volume.

BLACK POWER IS ANSWERED

The elections of the nation's first Negro major-city mayors in Cleveland, Ohio, and Gary, Ind., are not Negro victories. They were victories FOR the Negro, and because of this, are victories for the entire community.

It took white votes -- a great many white votes -- in addition to Negro votes to make Carl B. Stokes and Richard G. Hatcher the first of their race to win the top elective job in their respective cities.

In Boston, where Negroes are a much smaller minority than in Cleveland or Gary, white voters decisively rejected a white mayoral candidate who pitched her bid for office on a reactionary racial basis.

This is the answer to "Black Power," with its cry of separation from, it not outright war against, the "white establishment." This is democracy's answer.

Nov. 7, 1967, should make it clear to all which route -- riots and revolts or constructive politics and co-operation -- will eventually lead to equal citizenship and equal opportunity for all Americans.

The uniqueness of the English language is ever intriguing. The word 'polish' becomes 'Polish' --same spelling, different meaning and different pronunciation -- by the use of a capital letter. E. A. Enstrom of Greensburg, Pa., wonders if there are any other such words.

The answer is there are so many words of this type that a special word is used to identify them. There are called 'homonyms.' As the dictionary explains, a homonym is a word like another in sound or spelling, but different in meaning.

Thus we have meet and meat. We also have bow (bo) as bow and arrow, and bow (bou) the forward end of a ship or airplane. We have a row of seats, a row in the street, and to row a boat. And then we have privy, a legal term, and privy, an outhouse.

Cleave is a word that has two diametrically opposite meanings. It means to adhere closely, to cling; it also means to part, divide, or separate. Other such words are sanction and invaluable. They are called antonyms.

PORTABLE PHONE AIDS SALESMEN

On-the-go businessmen have finally been freed from the chains, or rather, wires that have bound them to fixed telephones, thanks to the first completely lightweight, portable telephone requiring no connections.

Called Portable Executive Telephone (PET), the device has received acceptance from the Federal Communications Commission after three years of research and development.

The transistorized unit weighs less than eleven pounds and provides direct service to any regular telephone virtually anywhere in the world. PET enables its owner to make and receive calls in vehicles or while walking according to Michael J. Minahan, executive vice president and general manager of Portatronic Systems, Inc., which is distributing the portable telephone.

Apparently top white spiritual leaders are pulling their punches on commies.

Why?

The indications are they, like the Negro spiritual leaders, have woke up to the fact that they are being used by the conspiracy that is shaping up our nation to become a police state dictatorship. "Divide and Conquer." Divide along political lines, race lines, any lines. Seems like about the only unfinished biz just now is to change our Constitution to where it will permit disarming the people, do away with the secret ballot, permit the conspiracy to name candidates the people have to vote for, give the military control over all citizens in all categories through political bosses, tax the churches out of existance, make war all over the world and cast all into prison on trumped up charges. Who dare to protest, and all of this is just the beginning.

H.L. Hunt Says

NEEDS OF VIETNAM POLICY

Public opinion polls throughout the country indicate that U. S. citizens are dissatisfied with our policy in Vietnam. Each year more troops are requested, but victory seems no closer. Echoing this discontent, Congressional leaders are questioning the wisdom of a strategy which is not committed to victory.

The Senate Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee issued a unanimous report on the conduct of the air war in Vietnam. This report indicates that despite its enormous technological capability, the U. S. is not putting it to effective use.

The Subcommittee report states that the air campaign has been seriously hampered by "fragmentation of our air power by overly restrictive controls, limitations, and the doctrine of 'gradualism' placed on our aviation forces." The Subcommittee also heard testimony that the Defense Department leadership has ignored the advice of those on the scene regarding which targets, because of their strategic importance to the Viet Cong, should be attacked.

Another section of the report stated: "All military witnesses stated that the closure, neutralization or isolation of the port of Haiphong was the single most important thing which could be done in North Vietnam from a military standpoint." Yet the Defense Department has consistently refused to approve any such action against Haiphong.

If the citizens of this Republic are to continue to pay the cost of the war in terms of money and lives, they deserve the assurance that every necessary step to win it is being taken. The Defense Department should follow the advice of its best men and dedicate itself to a policy of victory. HLH

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) -- Are you forging ahead or falling behind in the old rat race?

Just as you go to the doctor for an annual physical overhaul, it is wise to give your status a periodic checkup, for in our civilization a fellow who has lost his status is in a social graveyard -- whether he knows it or not.

But how can one be sure, since sometimes even your best friend won't tell you?

Well, here's a simple status test gratis. You're still climbing up the ladder, if --

You have more credit cards in your wallet than you do pictures of your family.

Other guys in the office washroom stand respectfully aside when you reach for a towel to dry your hands.

You received 10 more Christmas cards last year than you did the year before.

The bookies call you to see if you want to place any racetrack bets instead of waiting for you to phone them.

Either you take a winter vacation in Florida or manage -- sometime between the first of January and the middle of March -- to attend an important business convention in Arizona, Honolulu, Puerto Rico or the Bahamas.

Whereas formerly you used to take your family ice skating at a local pond, you now take them for a weekend at a ski resort.

You are considering taking up pole because the people you meet on golf links these days seem to have become so dreadfully common. Naturally, you gave away your bowling ball long ago.

Most of the groceries your family consumes are delivered to the rear door, and you settle the bill by check.

Your wife puts in more time at her hairdresser's than she used to spend shopping for bargains at the supermarket.

The reason that you don't make an annual contribution to your college's alumni fund isn't that you can't afford to -- it's because of annoyance that you haven't been elected yet to the board of trustees.

If there are any leftovers in your refrigerator, the maid is the one who has to eat them.

The gin you drink in your martinis is bottled for you by a snobbish little old boozemaker in Britain who sells only to a clientele that has been especially recommended.

When you pet dog gets sick, you don't take him to the veterinarian. You are so important that the veterinarian makes a house call.

The house you live in has more bathrooms than the number of rooms in the house you were born in.

Instead of playing the numbers game, you now play the stock market. You like to brag when you make a killing even though, as you admit ruefully to close friends, "it'll only muddy my tax picture."

In your home you keep a pistol and rifle hidden, just in case the Communists should change their tactics and attack the outer suburbs where you live.

Now and then you wonder whether the game is worth the candle.

Brother, you don't have to worry about lack of status. Your problem is to keep from being suffocated by status.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY:

LBJ readies bill to ensure clean fish; lax inspection has produced health hazards; fish state senator is consumers' champion.

WASHINGTON - President Johnson, who has turned out to be the most vigorous consumers' champion ever to sit in the White House, is preparing another food inspection bill. This one will protect the housewife from unsanitary fish.

Despite vigorous lobbying and a reluctant house of representatives, the senate, with a lot of White House help, last year put across a strong meat inspection bill. However, fish is still very sloppily inspected, and the President proposes to remedy the situation.

The American people eat 11 pounds of fish per capita each year -- a total of two billion pounds. Of this, 50 per cent is imported from 110 foreign countries, and is now uninspected. Some countries will permit American inspectors to look over their plants if they are sending sizable amounts of fish to the USA, but the Food and Drug Administration hasn't enough funds to do the inspecting.

It even lacks sufficient inspectors to adequately check on the 2,-200 fish processing plants and caneries which operate in interstate commerce in the United States. These plants are inspected only about once a year, if that often.

In addition, there are 1,500 intrastate processing plants and canneries not subject to federal inspection. State inspection in some states is lax or nonexistent.

Meanwhile fish have presented several health hazards, which on occasion have caused death or epidemics. One was the well-known case of Botulism which started from eating spoiled smoked salmon in Ohio and Michigan, and caused several deaths. Cases of hepatitis have also been traced to shellfish dredged from too near sewage outlets.

Finally, there is fish spoilage due to poor temperatures, causing salmonella or nausea.

Another problem has been the use of antibiotics to remedy fish spoilage. All of this has been impossible to check by the small staff of food and drug inspectors, even when they have jurisdiction.

FISHERMAN'S CHAMPION

There is also the question of inspecting 72,000 fishing vessels for health and sanitation.

To remedy this, the White House is drafting a tough fish inspection act giving more authority to the Food and Drug administration, arger staffs and federal jurisdiction over intrastate canneries and processing plants, unless and until individual states bolster their own inspection.

One interesting fact about the fish inspection proposal is that the champion consumers' guardian on Capitol Hill is long-time bachelor Sen. Warren Magnuson, who comes from one of the biggest fishing states, Washington. One of his best political friends and backers is Nick Bex, an old poker - playing pal of Harry Truman's.

Ignoring the opposition of the fishing industry, Magnuson is going to introduce the President's fish inspection bill, and will push it through his senate commerce committee.

He is convinced that, despite some protests, healthy fish will be the biggest boon to fishermen in the long run. Housewives who buy poor quality or spoiled fish are inclined not to buy it again.

Magnuson has been working with the Russians and the Japanese to protect American salmon, halibut, and the big fishing banks off both coasts of America. He will compile this with a forthright fish inspection bill to revitalize the entire fishing industry.

LBJ AND BABIES

Unless he changes his mind at the last minute, President (grandfather) Johnson will make a strong appeal in his state of the Union Message tomorrow (Wed.) for a program to reduce infant mortality. He is alarmed over the shocking fact that the United States, though the fourth largest nation in the world, ranks 14th in the death of babies.

The President has told aides he will urge congress to take care of impoverished mothers and their newborn. His hope is to provide adequate care for the mothers during pregnancy and infants for their first year. Most infant mortalities occur, according to statistics, in these crucial first 12 months.

The appeal to do something about infant mortality will be only part of a renewed call for welfare programs for his great society. He is particularly eager to spur research on improving medicines and hospital care.

EXIT THE GOOD DOCTOR?

It looks as if Dr. James L. Goddard, well-intentioned food and drug administrator, might be talking himself out of a job.

First he got quoted around the country last summer as saying he wouldn't object if his daughter smoked marijuana; indicating that smoking pot was not harmful to high school students.

Later he made a prediction that the small family drugstore was on the way out -- not a happy remark for the vice-president of the United States. Hubert Humphrey, the nation's no. 1 druggist, was born over his family drugstore in Huron, S.D., and still owns part of it.

More recently, food and drug agents seized 16 million weight-reducing pills produced by Western Laboratories of Denver, despite the fact that the pills had been sold by Western Research for more than 30 years and manufactured under the regulations and inspection of FDA. The FDA has had labels in its possession for seven years bearing the exact ingredients which it now considers "dangerous to health when used in the frequency and duration prescribed, recommended and suggested in their labeling." This is the charge now leveled at Western Research by FDA district director Fred Lofsvold in Denver.

If the pills were suddenly found dangerous for fat-reducing, as now alleged, the question is why this recent development couldn't have been imparted to the drug officials instead of staging a spectacular 16-million-pill raid, with U.S. marshals.

Dr. Goddard is reported on his way out.

Cool Colors Make Hottest Spring Fashion News

ROME AP - Cool colors that is the hottest news from the Italian spring - summer fashion collections, in their fourth day of showings today.

Designer after designer is driving the point home. Frosty white and pastels appear to have been bleached even paler with chalk. This, rather than any drastic change in line, is the headlin hitter.

As always in the Italian collections, fabrics are big scene stealers.

Intricate intarsia work impressed buyers at Mila Schon. Inserts and appliques in flower shapes, circles, chevrons and undulating stripes and the fashion crowd gasping at their intricacy and impeccable workmanship. These motifs were used with beautiful discreation on suits and unlined coats in creamy smooth wools.

Colors were pale and melting -powdery gray, ice-cold blue and, of course, white.

Funnel necklines, yokes and short capes keet the eye up high on suits. Hip - length jackets were softly tailored and sometimes slackly belted.

As at Fashion House Forquet earlier in the day, two-tone dresses were popular with white collars, sleeves and yokes in contrast with another color.

Slubbed silks were in keeping with the Italian trend for nonshiny surfaces.

Antonelli's discotheque dresses rattled like bead curtains with flying hula skirts made from sequinned fringe. Harop Marx wigs were teased into frizzy bushes that screamed out for strokes of the brush.

Booklet Offers Hints On Home Plumbing Care

Minor repairs in your plumbing should be made promptly. A clogged drain, dripping faucet or leaking water closet valve not only grate on the nerves, they also cost you money. Many such problems can be corrected by a handy member of your family. Other repairs should be made only by a plumbing contractor and his journeymen, to avoid the possibility of cross-connections between your potable water supply and the waste lines.

A booklet titled "Plumbing Care and Repair" helps you tell the difference between jobs calling for a professional's services and those you can do yourself. It also contains dozens of tips on how to make simple repairs. The booklet is available for 25 cents from Plumbing - Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60601.

Stars Being Taught

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "They don't teach you to be a starlet. They teach you to be a star, and that's what I want to be."

That is the ambition of Lara Lindsay, and she is being helped toward her goal by the most intensive star-building program ever instituted in Hollywood—the 20th Century-Fox school for new talent.

For 10 years the film industry, out of economic necessity, ignored the grooming of new stars. Studios felt they could no longer employ and train dozens of young hopefuls, a few of whom might turn into stellar attractions. The result: as the established stars died or faded away, there were few new ones to take their places. Box-office stars became fewer in number and higher in cost.

With its return to prosperity, 20th Century-Fox realized the urgent need to replenish the talent pool. The Zanucks, father and son, established a program under the supervision of talent executives Owen McLean and Jack Bauer. Today a score of young hopefuls are enrolled in the compulsory curriculum. Universal also has a talent school, but attendance is voluntary.

Lara Lindsay is one of the most promising Fox students. The name sounds a bit artificial, and it is. She was born Gladys Jacobs in Chicago, started skating at an early age and ended up in the Icecapades and other shows. She married an interior designer, became mother of a son, now 4. When the marriage started to break up, she capitalized on her blue-eyed, auburn-haired beauty by doing commercials on television in Tucson, Ariz. Her pay: $15 per commercial.

Then it happened—one of those chance events upon which acting careers are built. The Paramount Western "El Dorado" came to Tucson and Lara got a job standing in for Charlene Holt. Coworkers encouraged her to come to Hollywood. She did.

Lara went through the heartbreaking routine of trying to interest an agent in presenting her to the studios. She finally obtained one, also a new name — Lara from "Dr. Zhivago," Lindsay from a brother— and a rearranged set of teeth.

The agent took her first to 20th Century-Fox, where talent executives were enough impressed to order a personality test on film— in which the hopeful answers questions on camera to determine whether the personality comes across. After a couple of readings in dramatic scenes, Lara was signed Dec. 12, 1966, to a term contract starting at $175 a week.

Her schooling began immediately.

"It's an intensive schedule, from 10 to 5 every day, five days a week," she explained. "And you must attend everything. If you have too many unexcused absences, your salary is reduced.

"But it doesn't make sense not to attend. We're getting the best schooling a performer could find in Hollywood, and we're paid for it. I couldn't possibly afford the kind of classes I get at the studio."

Interfaith Marriages Become Common Pattern

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) -- Interfaith marriages, once a rarity in past periods of ethnic and religious aloofness in America, have become a common pattern. And a new study shows the proportion of them still is rising.

Religious analysts see both advantages and disadvantages in the trend.

"All studied show that the intermarried have a high risk of divorce," says Dr. Victor D. Sanua, associate professor os psychology at New York's Yeshiva University, and author of a broad survey of the practice.

However, he adds, this drawback in noticeable chiefly in cases when one party lacks any firm religious commitment, rather than because of a clash between differing religious beliefs.

On the positive side, a recent Catholic - Presbyterian conference concluded that a marriage between a Catholic and Protestant can be a useful contribution toward a fuller graps of unity in the Christian faith.

"If two people of differing faiths can live together in deep love and understanding, then we have something pointing to the great church of the future," said a conference spokesman, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Henry G. J. Beck, of Lyndhurst, N. J.

Children in mixed marriages, he added, should "become familiar with both traditions" of the parents, and while being reared clearly in one of them, should "be given a real reverence" for the other.

Dr. Sanua's research, drawing figures from a wide number of studies, indicate that the extent of interfaith marriages has increased steadily for more than two decades, and is expected to continue rising.

At present, he says, available statistics indicate an estimated "50 per cent of Catholics marry outside their faith. The percentage for Protestants seems to be about as high. For the Jewish group, it is approximately 17 per cent."

This constitutes a dramatic upswing, he commented, although no precise comparative figures are available for past periods. But a quarter century ago, he added, such a marriage could set neighbors talking.

"It was unusual," he said in an interview. But not anymore.

He said he doubted if the friendlier interreligious climate has stimulated the trend, adding that the main cause lies in the dissolving of old national ethnic lines, bringing Americans into generally "homogenized groups."

However, he notes, the proportion of intermarriages rises sharply in areas where one group is a small minority, in the midst of another overwhelmingly predominant group.

For example, the percentage of Catholic marriages to Protestants are much higher in the South, where Protestantism strongly predominates, while the Protestant intermarriage ratio rises steeply in heavily Catholic cities.

Similarly, Jewish intermarriages go up to 45 to 70 per cent in small cities and rural areas, where they are small minorities.

Dr. Sanua's report, entitled "Marriage Counseling: Psychology-Ideology," was edited by Dr. H. L. Silverman, of Seton Hall University, and issued by Charles Thomas publishers, of Springfield, Ill.

Kitchen Remodeling Will Exceed $3 Billion

More than $3 billion will probably be spent on kitchen remodeling next year, the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau says.

As you might expect, it's the lady of the house who makes the decision that it's time for remodeling. The main reasons are a lack of efficiency, a need for more cabinet or counter space and a need to re-arrange the kitchen to make room for desired appliances, such as an automatic dishwasher.

According to the Bureau, at least 40 million homes in the United States are over 10 years old. That's the age at which the typical homemaker decides her kitchen is outdated.

Among the popular new additions to remodeled kitchens are electric food waste disposers, dishwashers, two-bowl sinks, ranges with eye-level ovens and refirgerators, which have changed a great deal in the last decade.

Missouri Lacks High School TV Coverage

By RON JAYNES
Standard Sports Editor

While sitting in one of Southeast Missouri's well known cafes after finals of one of the district tournaments, this writer couldn't help but hear a conversation at a nearby table about why Missouri television stations don't carry high school sports as do TV stations in other states.

That thought stimulated the curiosity of this writer and he set out to scrape up the following facts for you who might have tossed the thought around in your minds with a friend of yours.

In the conversation that filled the ears of this writer, the participants kept going back saying that radio stations do a great job in covering the high school sports in Missouri by doing the district tournaments and following a district team to the state.

The study was interesting for this writer, who had toyed with the thought himself many times before, but just didn't take time out from covering the high school sports scene to check into the situation until the weatherman halted action a couple of nights in the past two weeks.

Perhaps one reason for the radio stations doing a good job carrying the tournaments and single games is that the Missouri State High School Activities Association makes no charges for carrying the games as it does for television and another is that the majority of the radios advertising comes locally while much of TV's comes from national sponsors.

In nearby Illinois, stations bid on coverage rights, according to one local radio station announcer while newspapers pay also for entering and covering the state tournament.

That's what most of the talk was about. . . how radio stations carry the state tournament play and TV stations sometimes omit scores from its brief sports broadcasts.

One's first thought, or well my first thoughts of why TV stations in Missouri do not carry the local sports as do radio and newspapers would be (1) they are not interested, (2) they have trouble in obtaining sponsors for the events, or (3) the price of the state is too high.

But a check on the last situation seems small in amount to what a station or stations might sell it to its advertisers for. (The state policy on television rights will follow at the end of this article).

In talking to MSHSAA Executive Secretary Irvin A. Keller in Columbia, his reason why radio stations are not charged for broadcast rights was not given and was not asked after he stated that each station carrying regional and state tournament play signs an agreement to publicize the tournaments beforehand and broadcast three prepared statements about the association. It is sort of a swap out. . . with radio getting the broadcast rights for free publicity.

Keller said that his opinion why the state tournament play in any sport has never been broadcast, live or delayed over state TV stations is the stations problem with preempting or cancelating evening programs to make room for the showing and the conflict with the games of one of the many professional teams in the state.

The policy of the association is not to go out and sell the TV rights. Its purpose is not to sell entertainment but to help in setting up and governing the state's high school activities, not only sports but band, speech and others.

Second is the state professional teams that tend to pressure the high schools for TV time.

Take Southeast Missouri... Our only area station carries few district high school basketball scores and many others across the state are the same way. . . but they do carry a full schedule of top college and professional sports.

Some of the thoughts brought up in the talk in the cafe was that TV stations cared little about the high school sports and that it would take a major advertiser to sponsor the event.

Both may be right, but the last statement seems to be the one to make the most sense. . . If as many people, who attended the state basketball tournaments last season, would write to their local TV stations or major sponsors one might just one of these days turn on his TV set and see and hear finals of a high school event.

Keller related that some six to eight years ago. . . Standard Oil company of Indiana approached the state for broadcast rights about the time the rules were set up. Everything seemed to satisfy the company except the charges of the telephone company. The program was dropped.

The attendance at the state basketball tournaments of 1966-67 set an all time attendance record with almost that many staying at home. . . and those at home would enjoy seeing the tournament in person or on TV.

A little attention should be given to high school activities and some needs to be taken away from so much professional play.

Your views, pro or con would be appreciated. . . drop your views to the Sports Department, 205 S. New Madrid, Sikeston, Mo. 63801.

Sports Corner

By RON JAYNES

--An enterprising Eastern high school basketball prospect sent Missouri University Coach Norm Stewart an informal scholarship application this week -- with a string attached.

The string actually was an enclosure -- indicating the athlete's arm span.

"I held one end in each hand, with my arms fully extended -- and it still drooped," Stewart said.

"Then I gave the string to Roy Dewitz (assistant M. U. coach). He has real long arms, but when he tried the same thing, the string still sagged in the middle."

Stewart didn't indicate any followup action on the long-armed prospect. He couldn't help speculate, though, that the youngster might be effective in any zone defense.

Battling with the flu bug for the past week and a half while Southeast Missouri cage teams have been battling the weather instead of each other . . . and our predictions have not been needed... we see fair weather and a full week of basketball action in store for area fans.

We left off at somewhere around 34 of 43 picks and will start off with our left foot forward to try and start off and pick up that average of 79 per cent to around the 85 mark if possible.

We've had few complaints about predictions after the first couple of days . . . so we guess all have settled down . . . Sure hope so.

O. K. swinging to tonight's schedule tournament and regular scheduled games . . . and looking at what we see . . . it doesn't seem as though we are in for any treats.

Tonight's Calls'

Scott-Mississippi Conference Tourney

Ilmo-Scott City vs. Chaffee -- Some battle this shapes up to be... We see the Rams coming off victors in this contest but not after a hard fought battle ... ISC 58, Chaffee 54.

Perryville Tourney

Jackson vs. Valle -- It looks as though Leo's quintet has got a chich win here. Jackson has been improving with every game and will only improve more with tonight's win. Jackson 63, Valle 51.

Perryville vs. College High -- The way it looks from here... the game may go either way... Perryville had better watch both its and its opponent's goal to make sure more ball goes through there's than the preps. Perryville 63, College High 57.

District

Kennett at Senath-H'ville -- It's about time for the Indians to go on the war path ...No better time than tonight against its arch-rival Lions. Mike Tweedy is the key to the Indians offense . . .but watch the Ricky Cash open up for Kennett. Kennett 79, Senath-H'ville 58.

Hayti N. at N. Pemiscot -- This looks like one of those . . . enie minie moe one's. . . . catch the first team in the lead and go with him . . . so we'll say Hayti 57, N. Pemiscot 64.

Howardville at Morehouse -- One thing's for sure in this game . . . It'll be filled with foul calls . . . cause both teams have an oddity of collecting 25 to 30 fouls a game . . . Sure hope the Tigers have gotton a little more bench strength . . . to back up that starting five . . . as one might remember that the Indians had only five to start the game in its last outing and lost three of those before the third period finished and two one quarter reserves. Howardville 111, Morehouse 899.

Advance at Zalma -- Shall we go into detail . . .since the Hornets have whipped Bloomfield it seems as though they can roll on and on and they will for a couple of games. Advance 75, Zalma 59.

Bell City at Puxico -- Those Indians have gotten some smoke rolling over there way . . . and it looks pretty dim from here for Bell City. . .Pux has come alive and with its 99 points against Richland they seem on the right road. . .but. . .Bell City 88, Puxico 83.

Dexter at Bloomfield -- We don't know what's happened to the Wildcats. . .but were sure it'll be controlled in tonight's game... The Wildcats are always up for the visiting Bearcats and what a battle this should be. Dexter 55, Bloomfield 51.

Gideon at Parma -- It's about time for Parma to do something.. .They have been on the downhill drive since playing Malden a good game ...How about snapping out of it tonight and snapping off the Bulldogs bid. No... says our little friend. . .there waiting for Risco. Gledon 69, Parma 48.

New Madrid at Matthews -- Starting its regional tournament drive with a flurry never seen before in Southeast Missouri... the Matthews pirates will begin tonight by crashing the Indians win bid in a New Madrid county conference game. Matthews 93, New Madrid 74.

Clarkton at Bernie -- This should be a rugged encounter ... Bill Chism should provide the winning punch . . . Clarkton 68, Bernie 59.

That it for now . . . good luck to all. . .

Winter A Hardship To Animals

Winter means hardship to most Missouri animals, and this includes wild animals as well as those that live in barns and houses.

Men and their domestic animals are generally not well equipped to cope with really severe cold and snow. But man can build himself a house and heat it, can preserve and store food for winter, and can erect shelters for his animals.

Wild things, on the other hand, are often poor builders and most of them cannot preserve and stockpile food; but they are built to survive average winter weather without these abilities. They have protective fur or plumage and are armed to dig, scratch or run for food.

This winter became severe before 1968 was fully hatched. Temperatures dipped to near or below zero on New Year's Eve and January holds little promise of a heat wave.

Many Missourians -- once they had seen to their own comforts -- started thinking about wildlife. Some suggested spreading grain for quail; others felt sorry for rabbits. Songbird feeders were freshly stocked.

The fact is, however, that wild creatures fare quite well in the winter. They need the same things they need at any other time of the year -- food and shelter, preferably close together.

A cottontail may hole up when the mercury drops to zero, but who wouldn't? The cold won't keep him from foraging for some thing to eat, though. Chances are that the hunter who got out of his car an hour ago is more miserable than the rabbit who was out all night.

Quail roost in a circle at night, sharing their body heat with each other. During the day they may either roost or move about in search of food.

Food for wild things is not as abundant in the winter, but they usually will find enough to eat. It seldom helps, and often is dangerous, for men to put food out for wild animals. For one thing, they generally place the food for animals they are most worried about -like quail. It is often consumed by animals they don't care much about -- like crows. This can lead a man to give up.

If he gives up for this, or another, reason what happens to the quail who have learned to depend on his bounty?

Men often put quail food in dangerous places. A quail would never choose to eat dinner in an open field, away from escape cover. But if a man puts a pile of corn in such a place, hungry quail may go to it. They are then easy prey for other animals that like quail.

The weather has to get really severe before it kills much wildlife. Quail, for example, may not get enough to eat when an ice storm freezes seeds into unbreakable shells. A prolonged spell of sub-zero weather can kill the birds even if they have plenty of food. These hazards account for much of the annual mortality of quail -- that number of birds that will die each year whether they are hunted or not.

If wildlife must be fed by man, the best time to think about it is during planting seasons when food plots can be established. New Year's Day is too late to worry about it.

Like other wildlife, fish survive winter weather pretty well. Fish are not endangered by ice on lakes or farm ponds unless the ice has a heavy cover of snow. Even then if the ponds are properly built and maintained there is seldom a problem. Unusually heavy snow cover on the ice of a small pond can choke out oxygen-producing sunlight. But even here the danger is greatest in ponds that receive barnyard drainage or contain large amounts of decaying organic matter that consumes oxygen.

What can man do about the hazards of winter? Well, he can feed his dog, get his livestock indoors, put antifreeze in his car and turn his thermostate up a little more.

And he can resolve to plant that food plot and let the brush grow near it. It won't help this year's quail, but next year's crop will love him for it.

Tourneys Spice Card

Full Slate Of High School Action Set For This Week

Southeast Missouri's high school basketball teams seem to be battling the weatherman nowadays instead of each other as old man winter has arrived and is playing around the time the district high school's teams are scheduled to do so.

For the past two weeks more games had to be postponed than were played. Some that have been re-scheduled from the first week of bad weather have been postponed for the second time.

But, cagers will try again this week to get in a game or two between the spells of bad weather as two tournaments along with a full slate of other regular scheduled activity dots the prep schedule.

With tournament action at Perryville and East Prairie kicking off the week, 32 high school teams pair up at 16 sites tonight in an attempt to get the ball bouncing once again, after some have had two weeks layoff.

Just about every team in the district has one and some have two games to make up or cancel between now and regional tournament time.

Highlighting the week is the Scott - Mississippi conference tournament at East Prairie, where many fans see a rematch of the Scott County Central - Oran clash of recent years. . .but which has been in the Braves favor so far this year with coach Kenneth Wages squad taking two wins over its arch-rival.

The two teams are seeded one and two in the tournament with the finals set for Saturday. Barring any upsets the two will meet for the third time this season for the championship which Oran has captured the last few seasons.

Conference clashes between the other district teams fill the schedule. Most teams fire up for their conference tournaments. Among those is Hayti North at North Pemiscot, New Madrid at Matthews and Dexter and Bloomfield.

The Dexter at Bloomfield clash is a non-conference tilt.

A real battle shapes up at Steele Thursday night when Delta C-7 calls in a Bootheel conference match.

Friday night's card is highlighted by the cross-town rival match of Howardville at Lilbourn in a New Madrid county conference meeting. Other top games include a SEMO conference showdown between Kennett and Poplar Bluff on the Mules floor. The two meet for the SEMO conference tournament earlier in the year and the small but aggressive Mules claimed the title over the top seeded Indians. Sikeston will be at Malden, Richland at Advance and Bloomfield at North Pemiscot to name a few of the top attractions of the 19-game Friday nigh schedule.

Saturday's card finds Salem at Poplar Bluff; Greenville at Neelyville and Portageville at North Pemiscot.

Also spicing the week's card... is more bad weather forecasts for the latter part of the week and a two-night tournament at Parma.

Extension Council Installs

NEW MADRID -- The New Madrid county extension council held its first quarterly meeting Jan. 8.

Mrs. Nelson Lumsden, retiring president, installed the following new officers: Mrs. Henry Hulshof, Portageville, President; Mrs. Johnny McWilliams, Lilbourn, Vice-President; Mrs. J. V. New, Risco, Secretary; Mrs. John Huie, Gideon, Treasurer; Mrs. O. Burnett, Matthews, Mrs. Ralph Hubbard, Catron, Reporter.

Bert Robbins, New Madrid County extension director, gave a report "The 1968 Outlook for Family Living". According to the economists, higher prices for most things seems a certainty. There are several things that will cause the increase; wage increases that occurred during 1967, increased cost of raw materials, and increased profit margins will all be reflected in retail prices during the coming months.

Robbins told of the need of blood doners for the blood bank at the University of Missouri Hospital and Medical Center. There is a need for sponsoring groups to help secure blood donors.

Mrs. Huldhof, president, appointed a committee to meet with a countywide health committee to make plans to accomplish this.

Mrs. R. Hubbard reported that $42 had been sent to Campbell-Harrison House to help in the purchase of a washing machine. (Campbell-Harrison House is a cooperative residence home for college girls enrolled in home economics, who need help to reduce college living costs). The following clubs and individuals made the gift possible: East Gideon club ($5), Matthews club ($5), Risco club ($2), Baderville club ($3), Canalou club ($5), North Lilbourn Busy Bee club ($3), New Hope club ($5), New Madrid County Extension Club Council ($5), Miss Rebecca Nistendirk ($5), Mrs. R. Hubbard ($2), and Portageville Mothers Club ($2).

Mental Health Clinic Cancelled

KENNETT -- The monthly Southeast Missouri Mental Health Clinic scheduled to be held Tuesday has been canceled. Officials at the Farmington State Hospital said the next regular clinic will be held in February.

Cancellation of the monthly clinic was brought about by dangerous road conditions and the inability of Dr. Emmett F. Hoctor to attend tomorrow's clinic. Dr. Hoctor, who was injured in a fall last week, has been unable to return to his duties because of an injured leg.

Announcement of the cancellation was made by Troy Wilson of Kennett, president of the Southeast Missouri Mental Health Association, co-sponsors of the clinic with the division of mental diseases.

Aldrich Plan May Scatter Film Studios

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Does Robert Aldrich's purchase of a film studio portend the economic future of Hollywood? He thinks so, and he could be right.

The film town was startled this month when the producer-director announced he had sold out his 15 per cent interest in the profits of "the Dirty Dozen" to purchase a venerable movie lot not far from downtown Los Angeles.

"Everybody's entitled to a dream," Aldrich romanticized as he explained why he bought the one-stage Sutherland Studio which dates back to Mary Pickford films of 1912. His dream was to own the Aldrich Studio, and soon he will. Part of the purchase plan is construction of two more stages during the next two years, with another to follow later.

Robert Aldrich is a practical man, and it wasn't merely a dream that motivated him.

"I think this is the way the picture business is going to operate in the future," he explained in his office at MGM, where he recently filmed "The Legend of Lylah Clare." "The land that major studios are on will become so expensive that they will no longer be able to afford to function where they are. The business will scatter into a collection of satellite studios such as mine."

Aldrich has worked at most of the major companies with his independent films--"What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?" "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte," "Flight of the Phoenix." He is well aware of the economics involved.

"To get financing from the major companies, you have to agree to use their studio facilities," he said. "That means you must absorb their cost of operating that big studio, and at the best you're getting a bum deal. If they have planned well, and the studio has been busy all year, it's not so bad. But if the studio has been idle for long periods of time, you have to pay for their inefficiency."

The Aldrich plan is bold, but it may point the way to the future. It appears certain that major studios cannot continue on their present basis. This week there were no pictures shooting at MGM, 20th Century-Fox, Paramount or Columbia, and only one apiece at Universal and Warner Brothers. Meanwhile the overhead on these immense film factories continues.

Young Yanks Save Old Italian Art

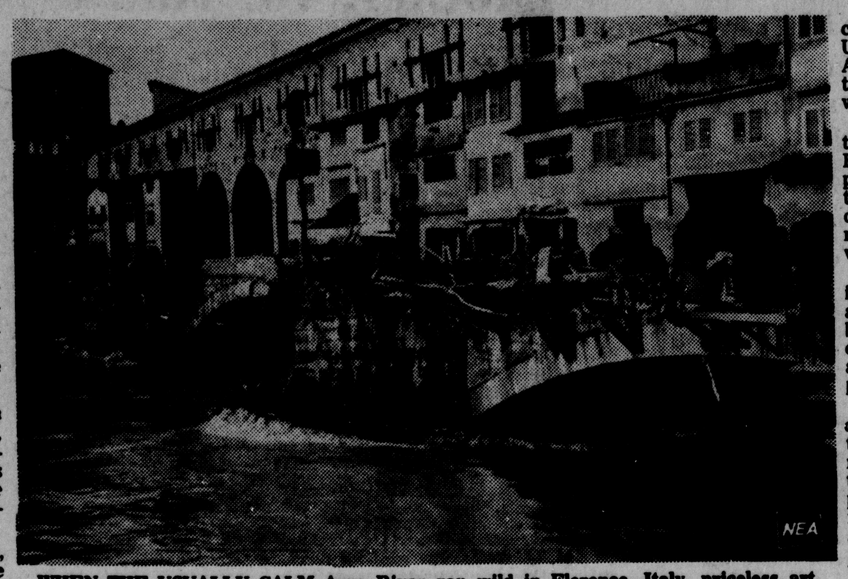

By JEFF COX

FLORENCE, Italy—(NEA)—Old Italian art treasures and young Americans have more than a nodding acquaintance here, where the combination of an Italian Renaissance spirit and youthful American know-how are bringing many of man's greatest artistic and literary treasures literally back to life.

Just how long the restoration project will continue depends on the enthusiasm and the money of the Americans. Maybe they'll be back, maybe they won't.

The trouble started about a year ago when the Arno river, usually a quiet stream meandering through Florence, was swelled by flood waters to the point where muddy gruel covered priceless art treasures.

That's where Steve Haas, 24, an art history graduate student at New York University, got into the act along with dozens of other young Americans who turned up in Florence to help the Italians restore their precious works.

WHEN THE USUALLY CALM Arno River ran wild in Florence, Italy, priceless art treasures seemed doomed. But young Americans pitched in with enthusiasm and money to do something about the situation. (Life Magazine—David Lees © 1966, Time, Inc.)

He got there through the Committee to Rescue Italian Art—known as CRIA—which was started by Prof. Bates Lowry of Brown University immediately after the flood. So far, CRIA has raised over $2 million to help the restoration, now scheduled to continue for at least another 20 years, though foreign support for the work may not continue nearly that long.

When Steve got to Florence, most of the city had been cleaned up. But in the old portion, with buildings dating to early Renaissance times, and especially around the Church of Santa Croce, flood waters had soaked the wooden panels used by Florentine masters, crept beneath the paint of ancient frescoes and deposited ruinous salt, mottled the parchment pages of medieval manuscripts and buckled the veneers of thousands of pieces of classical furniture.

Steve was given the job of guide, and led visitors around the restoration sites. He lived with friends, and worked almost 24 hours a week. The rest of the time was his, and he used it to see Italy.

"The work in Florence is just beginning," says Steve, "they're only restoring the major pieces now."

And how is it working with the Italians? "They're very grateful for the help CRIA and other groups have given them," he says, "but you have to be careful not to hurt their feelings. After all, it's their art and their show."

Another CRIA volunteer is Noel Kunz, 25, a student of art conservation at the New York University Institute of Fine Arts. She's been trained to actually help restore the art works.

"My job is to help remove the facing from the paintings. Facing is a resin-treated paper flattened over the works to keep the paint from peeling off. We had to carefully remove this and any mud that was left," she says.

Not every aspect of the flood is bleak, though. Restorers and art historians, peeling back damaged layers of paint on frescoes, have found older, and often more brilliant, paintings underneath.

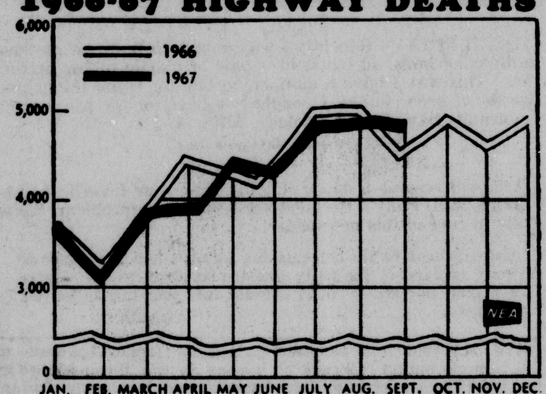

For instance, in the fifth-century baptistry of Il Duomo, the city's cathedral, water reached the hem of Donatello's St. Mary Magdalen, a priceless statue. Though a masterpiece, the statue had always been—in recorded memory—a rather ugly brown. When restoration was begun on the hem, workers found brilliant polychromed colors beneath.

Will Steve and Noel and others like them go back next year? No one knows how long enthusiasm in America will hold out for restoring art. If it wanes, CRIA might not be able to send more young volunteers for a summer of work and aid.

And without aid such as CRIA's and others', the 20-year project of restoration may take a century.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

1966-67 HIGHWAY DEATHS

Statistics based on National Safety Council estimates show motor vehicle deaths for the first nine months of 1967 were slightly less than for the same period in 1966, although Americans traveled more miles in '67.

Throwaway Dresses

BUT SAVE THE PIECES!

JEAN SPRAIN WILSON
AP Fashion Editor

NEW YORK (AP)—Husbands who had welcomed the current paper dress trend as a solution to the endless assault on their currency have discovered how wrong they can be.

A paper doll who goes to a paper ball the New York society way can send the cost of a socalled disposable gown sky-rocketing when she's used to the elegant touches.

Sable seemed such a suitable touch for Charlotte Ford Niarchos and mink was right for Maggie McNellis Newhouse, while diamonds were the best friends of other paper-clad golden girls at the Paper Ball aboard the S. S. Michelangelo recently

With immodest fortunes tied up and sewn onto gowns made of glossy or velour embossed or shredded paper who wants to toss them out?

Designer Bill Blass made a long caftan in a cheetah print with bead embroidery and that sable at the neckline and cuffs. Her sister Anne Ford Uzielli wore a wrap-around empire-waisted gown ruffly with white paper lace, set off nicely by glittering gems.

Certainly Henry Ford II's pretty daughters know the nice touches, both having attended a concentrated courses about the finer things conducted in Paris.

"He said I should keep this dress, but I'm sure I'll have to send back all this mink," said Mrs. Newhouse, who surveyed the long stretch of it that rounded her neck, marched down the front of her red velvet-like gown and bordered the hemline of the midi-length skirt. Gleaming red plastic boots worn with them finished off the Russian cossack look of her costume designed by Kasper.

"She's winter. I'm summer," said Ann (Mrs. Denniston) Slater, her gown in frothy layers of white eyelet daisy ruffles topped by a matching cape. Arnold Scaasi had conjured the garden of snowy flowers.

More flowers—some painted on, and some dimensional ones stitched on—were donned by Mrs. John Mosler wife of the safe-making family. Donald Brooks made it.

Young Wendy Vanderbilt's designer Sarmi gave her multi-colored paper dress a diagonally cut, ruffled hemline that was mini-high on the right side and floor length on the other.

"Is it really paper?" was the ice-breaking question of strangers as they encountered each other.

It was a valid question. The quality of paper dresses had improved a great deal since society had turned out for the last big Paper Ball in the area, this one in Hartford, Conn. more than a year ago.

Technically, most of the gowns worn by socialites were not really paper but an unwoved product made by Reemay of Du Pont which is close enough to it to warrant the license. Ordinarily, the designs from this product are of a simple nature, to keep production costs down.

When you hire top talent for custom designed paper dresses the costs are higher. In this instance, however, many of the designers made the dresses in the name of research, charity (The Policeman's Athletic League) and the kind of prestige that Fords and Vanderbilts and Moslers can give a designer and paper dresses.

Paper—or the Reemay version of paper—is still meant to be fun, to be worn a while and thrown away before it gets boring.

But if the trend turns to trimming it with sables and jewels then emptying the waste baskets may become a very profitable profession.

Bomb Shelter

Katarinaberget, the world's largest bomb shelter, lies beneath Stockholm, Sweden. This huge excavation in solid rock could hold 17,000 people in case of nuclear attack.

PAPER FORDS . . . From left, Mrs. Giancario (Anne Ford) Uzielli in a paper ruffled wrap-around by Charles Weinberg; and her sister, Mrs. Charlotte Ford Niarchos in a cheetah-printed caftan, lavishly trimmed in sable and beaded embroidery at the neck and cuffs.

Safety Measures Prevent Toddler From Toppling

By POLLY CRAMER

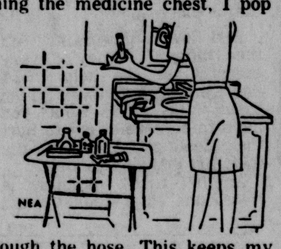

DEAR POLLY—I used a wide, soft piece of elastic screwed into the bottom of my grandchild's portable bassinet, under a pad, as an infant safety belt. The soft elastic, tied up and over the bundled infant, gives us some measure of protection should anything bump the car or should the bassinet tip for any reason. Also, a child's restaurant dining seat may be placed on the front seat of a car, with the car's seat belt drawn through the arms, to secure the active toddler. This will also allow him to be elevated enough to see out the window. In these days and times, we must be prepared for any eventually, as babies are too precious to risk in avoidable accidents.—MRS. E. F. C.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I have six lovely nylon aprons which I use for good. After washing them, I found it is impossible to iron them so that they are fit to use again. Is there a way to iron these aprons so they will be new-looking and not a wrinkled mess?—MRS. M. H.

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell the lady how to prepare old hose for stuffing pillows. Several I have stuffed are as good as if I had used feathers. I cut the heels, toes and any seams off first. Using large sharp scissors, I cut them very fine and they even look like dark feathers. Do not stuff them into the cases too loosely. This type of pillow washes well and is easy to handle.—MRS. J. S. B.

DEAR POLLY—When cleaning the medicine chest, I pop open a snack tray table to stand all the bottles and tubes on. They are also handy when cleaning the linen closet or refrigerator.

My washer is in the kitchen, so when I defrost the freezer I remove the agitator from the washer and put all the packages of frozen food in the washer. It keeps them cold, yet allows any moisture to drain off through the hose. This keeps my kitchen neater-looking during the entire defrosting procedure. —MARVA

DEAR POLLY—Recently I was unable to find new clothes-dampening bags, so I bought a pair of plastic pillow protectors. This way I have a dampening bag for white things and one for colored clothes. I bought two bags for the same price I normally have to pay for one.—MRS. A. S.

Ann Landers

Mother, 76, Told to Leave Her Crybaby Son, 55

Dear Ann Landers: I am a woman 76 years old. Last March my daughter-in-law had a heart attack and died suddenly. There were no children. When I went out for the funeral (1200 miles) my son begged me to stay and help him get over his heartache.

Ann, I have been here for 10 months. I am desperately homesick for my little apartment, my grandchildren and the life I used to lead. I do not like this climate and I work from morning till night -- washing, ironing, cooking and cleaning. His day lady quit when I moved in and he has not tried to replace her.

I have told my son three times that I want to go home but each time he sits down and cries like a baby and says I can't leave him. I have offered to keep house for him if he will come back West, but he says a man 55 years old can't start over.

Please tell me what to do. I don't want to add to this boy's problems. Lord knows he has had enough. -- LONESOME MOTHER

Dear Mother: This "boy" is 55 years old and it's time he grew up. My advice is to pack your bags and leave. Your son will get along without you--perhaps better. A woman 76 years of age is entitled to spend her remaining years in her own home, not as drafted servant for a 55-year-old crybaby.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm beginning to think that American girls are crazy and if I want to find a wife I will have to go to Japan. Here is my story:

I am 34 years old, respectable, make good money, am a neat dresser, good dancer, good swimmer and bowler, have money in the bank, most of my hair and all of my teeth. The problem is that I am 5'5" and every girl I ever wanted to get serious with has ditched me for a taller guy.

I have let it be known where I work that I am eager and eligible yet nobody has gone out of his way to fix me up a date. I've even written to matrimonial agencies and lonely hearts clubs. When the women answer, they want to know how tall I am.

Since you're the lady with the answers, I'd like one, please. -- SHORT CIRCUITED

Dear Circ: I have no answer, but I do have a question. How come a respectable, marriage-minded male who makes good money, is a neat dresser, good dancer, bowler, swimmer, with most of his hair and all of his teeth, has to beg friends to fix him up with blind dates and writes to matrimonial agencies and lonely hearts clubs?

Fellows get married every day and not all these guys are tall. The next letter will interest you since the man involved is six inches shorter than you.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the girl who is 5'11" and can't find an interesting guy who is tall enough for her. The shrimps seem to be the ones who make her feel alive mentally. I have a story that might point the girl in the right direction.

Aunt Nora was a divorcee with three sons to raise. She was no beauty and nearly 5'7". Aunt Nora met a man who was 4'11". They fell in love and married.

The two of them were a mighty odd-looking couple. People often turned around just to catch another glimpse of them. The whole family thought she was nuts.

It's been six years since they married and I have never known a happier couple. They have the baby girl they both wanted so much and the three boys are growing up to be wonderful men. What's more, the whole family adores "the runt" and feels Aunt Nora was lucky to get him. -- WISER NOW

Dear Wiser: Thanks for letting us know where Aunt Nora's good sense led her. People who marry for appearance's sake learn quite promptly that those they were trying to impress were not worth the trouble.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents. . If you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

If You Were The Judge

Operation Fails But Father Can't Collect

When the child labor laws failed to stop his numerous children from working him to death, Charley decided to undergo an operation that would put an end to his ability to have children.

After the operation, Charley felt marvelously relieved. That is, until he arrived him one night and was informed by his wife that she was going to have another "blessed event." Furious, Charley sued the doctor who had performed the operation on him for fraud, misrepresentation and everything else he could think of.

"It wasn't my fault," the doctor responded plaintively. "Every operation just isn't a success. Besides," he added while managing a nervous smile, "having kids is wonderful."

"Maybe for the Old Lady Who Lived in the Shoe," was Charley's answer, "But not for me. I didn't want any more kids and you said the operation was the answer. Since it didn't work, you're responsible."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the doctor pay Charley damages for fraud or misrepresentation?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that since there was no proof that the doctor either knew or should have known that the operation had failed, Charley could not claim that he had been a victim of fraud of misrepresentation. Nor was there any proof of the doctor's negligence. "And" concluded the judge in effect, "because Charley had a healthy child did not entitle him to damages."

Drooping Sales Stir Discontent

NEW YORK (AP) — This business year could be called the year of the salesman, for consumer reluctance very likely will test the wits of American salesmanship. Order takers will be in real trouble in 1968.

For many months now business expectation have often been more romantic than realistic. Though gains have been made in many retail areas, these gains have been disappointingly small. Some industrial sales have been disappointing also.

Increasingly there is heard the complaint that seven years of prosperity and seller markets have permitted once lean and spare sales forces to become flabby and dull, too comfortable to compete for new business, too placid to innovate.

During this process, the complainants state, some retailers have fallen badly out of touch with the consumer, failing not only to anticipate his moods but failing also to understand them. Their sales efforts are out of tune.

Sales executives aren't going to take this criticism much longer, nor can they, for the pressure is on them. This pressure will be vented downward, to marketing men, to sales manager to salesmen. That's where the buck stops, where the dollar comes in or else.

In executive offices all over America campaigns are now being devised to put zip into sales promotions, to pinpoint advertising, to innovate marketing methods, to excite and sharpen salespeople.

The emphasis very likely will be on a return to fundamentals: be optimistic, enthusiastic, helpful, especially in providing service. Above all, be informed, for some consumers today are knowledgeable as purchasing agents. They want facts rather than opinions.

"The consumer has found his voice and has started to use it," said Betty Furness, the President's special assistant for consumer affairs, in a talk this week.

"This voice is going to sound in other directions now," she said. "Not only has the consumer found his voice, he is also sharpening his memory."

In Miami Beach this week, William Luneburg, president of American Motors Corp., told car dealers they will have to do "the best sales job in history to overcome the 'wait and see' attitude developing among consumers."

"There is an increasing hesitancy to commit by the consumer," he said. Uncertainty about war, taxes, prices and the disturbed urban environment are affecting buying habits. "They pose a real challenge," he said.

Blaiberg and Daughter Hold Tearful Reunion

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP)— Heart transplant patient Philip Blaiberg had a tearfully happy reunion with his 20-year-old daughter Jill in Groote Schuur hospital today.

Miss Blaiberg arrived from Israel Monday night to see her father, who two weeks ago underwent the world's third human heart transplant. The girl is a student in Israel.

"I was a bit weepy," the smiling blonde girl said as she left the hospital. "He also had tears in his eyes. We grinned at each other like Cheshire cats. He looks marvelous. He's different— happy and healthy like the man I knew as a young girl."

Blaiberg's heart disease had aged him considerably, but his wife and doctors have said he looks years younger since a new heart was grafted into his body Jan. 2.

A hospital bulletin said Blaiberg's condition continues to be very satisfactory.

In Stanford, Calif., Mike Kasperak entered his 10th day with a new heart on an encouraging note, though remaining in critical condition.

"Kasperak's heart function continues to be satisfactory," said the latest Stanford University Medical Center Bulletin, issued Monday.

It noted moderate improvement following an operation Sunday to remove the gall bladder. Kasperak's liver function was "returning slowly to normal," physicians said, and the crisis with his liver may be over.

New Program Helps Hard of Hearing

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — The curly haired 3-year-old boy watched closely as his mother mixed flour in a bowl on the kitchen table.

"Let's make a cake," she tells the youngster in carefully distinct syllables.

The mother repeats the words three times as the boy gazes intently at her face. At last he grins and chirps, "Cake."

An ordinary domestic scene? Not quite.

The child is almost totally deaf, and the two - story frame house is not theirs but a parent-home clinic established by the University of Kansas Medical Center.

One of four such projects across the nation financed by federal funds, the house is used to show parents in a familiar atmosphere how to help teach children with impaired hearing.

"We tried for years to tell parents in our offices how to do it, but it just didn't work out very well in many cases," explained Dr. June Miller, audiologist and director of the medical center's hearing and speech department.

"In a home situation, the parents can see clearly how and what they must do to help. We're very enthusiastic about it."

Established only a few months ago, the program involves 31 youngsters with varying degrees of hearing loss. Some of the children also have visual problems, are slow learners or have other handicaps.

Most of the boys and girls are under 3. Experts would like to begin the training at ages as early as 6 months, or as soon as a baby is known to have impaired hearing.

A hearing clinician works with the mother or father— often both— to coach them on helping the child understand others and ultimately learn to speak. Parents bring their child on regular visits to the home center until the youngster is ready to enroll in a special preschool program.

"The big problem is getting the parents to simply talk to the child of something that interests him— anything to get the child to look at them," Dr. Miller explained.

"Adults should talk in a normally loud voice, often and meaningfully to draw the child's attention."

When they first come to the home center, some of the deaf youngsters seldom look at their parents when the latter speak. They live in a silent world of their own.

But in surroundings familiar to both of them, parent and child are shown how to communicate while playing games or performing routine household tasks.

"It's a lot of work," said one mother.

"You've got to keep repeating the same thing over and over until she understands it. But I've learned.

"Now at home when Mary is around I make a point of explaining everything I'm doing. It's amazing how quickly they pick things up."

The home center uses a television videotape device to film parents working with their children. The film is replayed immediately while the instructor points out how to improve the lesson.

Dr. Miller noted although about four of every 100 children have hearing problems and one of 300 suffers severe impairment, there are still a lot of misconceptions about deafness.

Some adults forbid their children to play with deaf youngsters, because they're afraid the disability is catching.

Others are ashamed of their child's hearing problem, believing it to be divine retribution for sins of the parents or even grandparents.

There's no seller without a buyer!

The store looks big. It employs lots of people...has hundreds of yards—maybe miles—of shelves with tens or even thousands of items—all neatly packaged and arranged.

And yet, there's nothing bigger in the store than you. No detergent, no can of soup, no great new frozen idea.

Because no matter how hard the seller sells, if you don't like what he sells—there's no deal.

That's how the system puts you in control. You tell the seller whether you like his wares—or not. He'll get the message. It's brief: "You pays your money and you takes your choice."

Pastsy Ann Goodpasture told authorities the man broke into her home near Rushville. She said he threatened her and the boy, and then raped her. She told police she grabbed the pistol and shot the man in the chest. He fled from the home and collapsed in a roadway where he died.

The woman said the man, a Negro, had been at her home several times previously to inspect a motor that her husband had for sale.

Lake Ozark Liquor by Drink Vote Barred

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Atty. Gen. Norman H. Anderson ruled today the city of Lake Ozark, which has less than 500 inhabitants, may not hold an election on sale of liquor by the drink.

But Anderson said other laws limit liquor by the drink elections to cities of over 500 population.

In another opinion the attorney general held no neptism or conflict of interest is involved when a prosecuting attorney hires a county judge's daughter as his secretary.

Bell City School Robbed

BELL CITY -- The Bell City high school was broken into over the weekend, and $290 in cash taken from the two administrative offices.

How the thief or thieves entered has not been learned, according to Deputy Sheriff Cecil Hicks. No doors were pried open or glass broken.

The money was obtained by prying open a cabinet in the superintendent's office, where $105 was taken, and $185 from the principal's office.

Nothing else in the two offices was disturbed.

The loss was discovered Monday morning.

Strangling Inquest Opens

ST. LOUIS (AP) - The superintendent of the St. Louis State School and Hospital told a coroner's inquest today more employes would help diminish the possibility of circumstances that led to the strangulation deaths of three inmates.

Coroner Raymond Harris asked Dr. Cecil G. Baker of the hospital how many employes were on duty in Donnelly Hall last Wednesday morning when the inmates were strangled.

Dr. Baker told the coroner three people - two women and a man - were working the hall. He added that at least six people were needed in the building and that "more male employes would help." He cited low salaries as a reason the hospital has problems in keeping personnel.

The three inmates were found strangled with pieces of a bedsheet. County police said four inmates admitted strangling the young men and said they planned to kill more, but got tired and quit.

Marilyn Kruger, a registered nurse who works on the day shift at Donnelly Hall, told the inquest she found one of the victims and notified authorities. She said four or five more employes would make it possible for the staff to give adequate supervision.

In reply to questions, the nurse and Baker said there also were problems with six deviation. Both said additional personnel would help control that problem, too. The nurse said she felt additional recreational facilities were needed as the patients had too much idle time.

A woman, sho told the inquest she had a son at Donnelly Hall, testified that her son told her he and another boy tried to attract the attention of attendants Wednesday morning, but they were sent back to bed by a nurse.

Wright Quits as Director

PORTAGEVILLE -- A. W. Wright, director of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation, has submitted his resignation as director of the DAEOC board of directors.

The resignation will become effective as soon as the board has employed a new director.

Wright said his plans are indefinite but that he might continue to work in some phase of the poverty program.

Prior to coming to DAEOC, he was superintendent of schools at Illmo-Scott City 20 years, retiring in the spring of 1967. He has been DAEOC director since June.

Wright succeeded Bill Clare as director. Clare resigned to take a position with a school system to Illinois.

Prior to Clare the position of director was filled by acting co-directors, Lloyd Phillips and William Graves, who served in the capacity after DAEOC's first director, Earl Williams of Anniston, was discharged by the DAEOC board in August of 1966.

Phillips and Graves were discharged by the board last spring following a bitter dispute between the Kansas City regional Office of Economic Opportunity and the DAEOC board.

The director's salary is $12,000 a year.

Downtown Merchants Draft Constitution

A new constitution was drafted for the Downtown Merchants Association by five of its members in a special meeting last night in the Chamber of Commerce Office.

Details of the new constitution will be explained by five teams, composed of two merchants each, to each downtown merchant in the next 10 days. Team members will meet at 10 a.m. tomorrow at Luber's Restaurant to decide which merchants each team will visit.

The objective of the association was defined in the meeting last night. It is to promote the downtown area of Sikeston and develop good will in the Sikeston trade area.

Some of the rules set forth in the constitution include that all members shall be downtown merchants, that the Chamber of Commerce shall work cooperatively with the group on all promotions, that members shall cooperate on major promotions and that merchants shall urge employes to use off street parking.

Other rules dealt with the term of officers and the dues of members.

A general membership meeting will be held for the election of officers after all merchants are visited and the new constitution is explained, Richard Pinkerton, Chamber of Commerce manager said today.

Constitution committee members are Stanley Bush, Z. E. McAmis, Ed Rider, Venson "Shiek" Jones and Raymond Wright.

TVA Scores Victory In Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP)- The Tennessee Valley Authority won a major victory over a private power supplier, Kentucky Utilities, in the Supreme Court today.

The net result of the 6-1 decision is to authorize supply of TVA power to two small villages in Tennessee. But the issues go deeper than that, and the ruling, by Justice Hugo L. Black, firmly establishes TVA's right to determine the precise regions it may service under congressional authority.

Today's action undoubtedly will set the pattern for other cases in lower courts that deal similarly with extension of TVA power along its primary service area.

The ruling involved interpretation of an important amendment to the Tennessee Valley Authority Act in 1959. While authorizing TVA to raise money for expansion and development through the sale of bonds, Congress established some service rules.

TVA was allowed to supply power to the area for which it was the "primary" source on July 1, 1957. At the same time, it was barred from supplying municipalities within a five-mile peripheral area who were receiving power from private sources.

TVA contended Congress had left it to the TVA board to define exactly what was meant by the "primary" and the "peripheral" areas.

New Patrol Headquarters Sought

Special to Daily Standard

JEFFERSON CITY -- A request for $436,000 in state funds to build a new headquarters for troop E of the Missouri State Highway Patrol was made Monday in a capital improvements hearing before the house appropriations committee.

Col. E. I. "Mike" Hockaday, superintendent of the patrol, said today the present facility serving highway patrolmen in Southeast Missouri near Poplar Bluff has been outgrown.

When meetings are held there, girls on the staff are required to leave to make room for patrolmen, he said.

The present facility has 2,700 square feet. The new building is designed for 14,000 square feet, Hockaday said.

Another reason for the request is the fact the present facility at the outskirts of Poplar Bluff will be bypassed by highway 67 when it is extended in dual lanes to the south, he said.

It probably will be near the end of the 60-day special legislative session convened Friday before the outcome on the request is known as most appropriations bills are usually the last considered, Hockaday said.

If the money is allocated, the new headquarters building would be located on one of the most traveled highways in the troop E area. For the greatest efficiency of the office it should be located more centrally according to population and traffic in the area, Hockaday said.

Traffic and population factors apparently would weigh more heavily in locating the new office than a purely geographical center.

The Troop E area is bounded on the south by the Arkansas border, on the west by Ripley and Iron counties, on the north by Iron and Perry counties and on the east by the Mississippi river.

Hockaday also requested a $2 million allocation yesterday for the construction of a new State Highway Patrol Training Academy in Jefferson City. It would be an 80,000 square foot structure capable of training 120 men.

A new academy is needed to replace the one operating in Rolla, which has a 60-man training capacity.

Several police departments, including Sikeston, send men to the academy for training.

Some of the requests for training by police departments have to be delayed because of the space limitations and the need to train highway patrolmen at the academy.

Fiery Blast Follows Seaport Collision

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The freighter Christiana smashed into a string of gasoline-laden barges in the Houston Ship Channel today turning the water into a blazing inferno as the volatile fuel exploded in sheets of flame.

Two American tourists, the captain's wife and 3-year-old daughter, and 27 officers and crewmen scrambled into the ship's lifeboats and fled through the fiery waters. State police said they had no reports of serious injuries.

The collision occurred about 12:30 a.m. just south of a highway tunnel between the suburbs of Baytown and La Porte, which is 30 miles southeast of Houston.

The Christiane, a 372-foot craft of Liberian registry owned by Christiane Shipping Co. of Bermuda, was outbound toward Port Arthur, Tex., when it struck the barges being pushed by the tugboat Barbara Waxler.

One barge was empty but the other two bore 30,000 barrels of high octane gasoline which exploded, spraying fire across the chilly waters of Upper Galveston Bay.

Help was close by because rescue units along the heavily industralized waterway were still dealing with an explosior and fire that broke out two hours earlier and 12 miles upstream at a Shell Chemical Co. plant.

Israel Says Soviets Given Yugoslav Base

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - The Israeli newspaper Maariy reported today that Yugoslavia has given the Russians a naval base at the Adriatic port of Split to help support the Egyptian regime of President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

In Belgrade, a spokesman for the Yugoslav Foreign Ministry said the report is "without any foundation."

The paper's Paris correspondent said reliable foreign sources reported the agreement between President Tito and Soviet leaders has been kept secret, but observers have noted that Soviet warships sail regularly between Split and Eygptian ports.

The agreement was reached shortly before the Eygptians sank the Israeli destroyer Elath with a Soviet-built missile beat on Oct. 21, the paper said.

Maariy said its scources reported many Yugoslav leaders were critical of Tito's move, fearing it might threaten their independence from the Soviet Union.

At least three Soviet warships and submarines now dock regularly at Split, the report said, and housing and clubs have been opened for Soviet seamen.

Meanwhile, in the Gaza Strip near El Arish Monday night, an Israeli tank truck ran over an antivehicle mine, the Israeli army said the Tel Aviv. The blast damaged the truck and injured its driver, and a search was on today for the saboteurs responsible.

The Israeli army denied claims from Damascus by El Fatah terrorists that their units "heavily damaged" an Israeli potassium plant west of the Dead Sea Jan. 7. A spokesman said the plant had not been attacked.

Buses Collide, 5 Hurt

CHARLESTON -- One bus driver and four school children were injured, when two school buses collided on highway K, about four miles northeast of Charleston, today, at 7:30 a.m.

Both buses were traveling east on the Big Lake Road, east of highway 77, when a 1967 bus owned by the Charleston R-1 district, and driven by Clyde Sanders, 64, Charleston, stopped to pick up children.

A second school bus, a 1967 Chevrolet, belonging to St. Henry's school, Charleston, driven by Delber Zoellner, 47, Charleston, did not see the first bus because of fog until he came close. He applied his brakes and his vehicle crashed into the rear of the other bus on the icy road.

Injured in the Charleston R-1 bus was the driver, cuts on his head, and a passenger, Ruby Rogers, 16, Charleston, possible concussion. Both of the injured were taken to Missouri Delta Community hospital in Sikeston.

In the St. Henry's Catholic school bus, the injured were passengers, from Charleston - Stephen Scheffer, 10, minor face cuts; Mary Striker, 9, cuts on her face, and David Barley, 13, minor cuts and teeth knocked out. All injured in this bus were treated in a Charleston clinic.

The highway patrol investigated but made no arrests.

At 8 a.m. today on route J, five miles southwest of Hayti, a two-car collision sent two men to the Pemiscot Memorial hospital in Hayti.

A 1961 Chevrolet, driven by Curtis Tipler, 36, Steele, was struck by a 1964 Chevrolet, driven by Robert Vaughn, 17, Steele, when the Vaughn car crossed over the center line and sideswiped the Tipler car.

Tipler received cuts on his face, and Vaughn a broken nose and face cuts.

Vaughn was given a summons for being on the wrong side of the road.

Both drivers escaped injury when two cars collided at 10:30 a.m. Monday on highway 61, two miles north of Marston.

A 1953 Chevrolet, driven by Roy Tillmon, 41, Marston, attemped to make a left turn, when his car was struck in the rear by a 1968 Buick, driven by Lawrence Hollenbeck, 63, Sikeston, the highway patrol reported.

$300,000 More Needed for Hospital

The new wing of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital should be completed Feb. 1 and will make the facility "outstanding," Administrator Harold Jones reported to the Rotary club last night at the Rustic Rock Inn.

Jones made a progress report on construction of the new wing and renovation of the old building and appealed for financial assistance.

He said that the improvements will cost $3,100,000 of which $915,500 will be supplied by the federal government with $2,185,000 to be raised locally.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Coleman have contributed $1,130,000 to the undertaking, he said, and an additional $755,000 has been raised by contributions of others. A balance of $300,000 is needed and the hospital administrator urged "gifts from those who desire to help themselves and their families."

Jones said that the 90 beds the new wing provide are "vitally needed" and will be immediately used.

The hospital will have when completed a new, enlarged emergency department, which will provide better care with rooms for families and for police questioning in private; the radiological department will have three diagnostic rooms, special procedures rooms for rapid diagnosis, X-ray and deep therapy, isotope therapy, a complete physical therapy department with exercise areas and a class room for in-service program.

"The fresh air system will be brought up to date throughout the hospital," Jones said.

There will be four major operating rooms instead of two, intensive care space for heart patients and defices to measure brain and muscle damage.

The speaker was introduced by Sharron Pharris.

Gary Estes and David Miller were inducted as members of the club by Lennie Whitworth.

Fred Koch, president of the club, announced that the club was a 200 per cent contributor to the Rotary Foundation, which provides funds for study abroad. This means that the club has contributed $20 per member on the average to the foundation.

Fred Schultz, St. Louis, president of Canvas Products, was a visiting Rotarian. His guest was Jean Torrence, St. Louis, executive vice president of the company.

Charles Green led the singing accompanied by Kay Hawkins at the piano.

Mercury Dips Down to Four

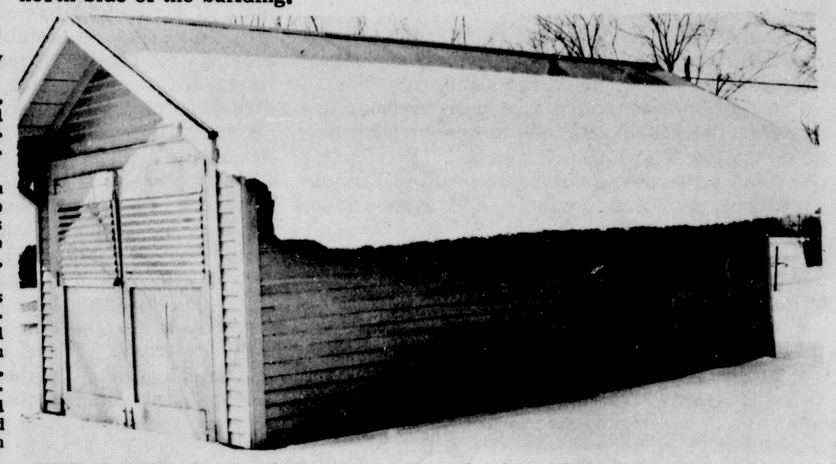

A 36-degree range in temperatures occurred in Sikeston for the 24-hour period preceding 7:30 a.m. today.

The mercury plunged to four overnight after a reading of 40, high enough to make snow slushy, yesterday afternoon.

Fog contributed another hazard to slick streets this morning and a repeat appearance was forecast for tomorrow.

THIS SNOW SLIDE hangs from the garage roof of Lt. Col. George T. Johnson, retired army officer, and Mrs. Johnson at 403 Dorothy St. A four-inch layer of frozen snow is hanging over the roof 30 inches on the north side of the building.

THE SOUTH SIDE of the garage roof of Lt. Col. George T. Johnson, retired, and Mrs. Johnson came in for its share of the snow slide, too. Low temperatures held the slides in position.

Wilson Announces Withdrawal of British Armed Forces in Far East and Persian Gulf

LONDON (AP) - Prime Minister Harold Wilson announced today the withdrawal of all British armed forces from the Far East and the Persian Gulf by the end of 1971.

Unfolding his austerity program before the House of Commons, he also announced a campaign to slash benefits in social welfare.

Although the intention is to leave the Far East by 1971, Wilson said his government was prepared to continue aiding Britain's Commonwealth partners in Southeast Asia through a "joint air defense system for Malaysia and Singapore." Britain will also train personnel to operate the system.

Wilson announced cancellation of a contract to purchase 50 American F111 swing-wing bombers at a cost of $1.02 billion.

The prime minister was grim faced as he rose in the House of Commons to announce details of the Labor government's drive to make Britain solvent.

Princess Margaret was in the gallery sitting near Wilson's wife.

The prime minister said Britain's future foreign role will have to depend on its ability to pay.

"We have to come to terms with our role in the world," Wilson declared.

He told the House Britain will retain its bases in Europe from which forces can be deployed overseas in time of conflict.

The prime minister said the F111 cancellation will mean a saving to this country of $960 million even when penalty costs for cancellation are taken into consideration.

His announcement of the cancellation brought cheers from Labor benches in the House.

Wilson's austerity package was the result of more than 30 hours of tough wrangling within his government over the past week.

"Our purpose in this review is to make devaluation (of the pound) work because until we do, until we are earning year in, year out, substantial surplus on overseas payments, we are unable internally or externally to do all the things which as a nation we would like to do," the prime minister said.

"Abroad it means reassessing our role in the world and realistically limiting commitments and outgoings to our true capacity."

Wilson's statement will be followed by a two-day debate, beginning Wednesday. At its conclusion Thursday will come a vote of confidence in which the government is assured of victory by the Labor party's Commons majority of 85 votes. But Wilson may have to accept the resignation of a minister or two whose favorite projects were treated especially rough.

Regardless of how Labor's left wing may howl at the cuts in the social services, no sizable segment of the party is going to precipitate a revolt which would force the government to face a general election it would be certain to lose. This means that Wilson does not have to call an election for another three years, and he is banking on getting Britain into the black before then, a miracle that would insure the Laborities another lease on the government.

Wilson and the Cabinet decided to speed up the withdrawal from Southeast Asia and the Persian Gulf despite pleas for delay from Washington and the four Commonwealth partners in the region - Malaysia, Singapore, Australia and New Zealand. President Johnson wrote Wilson privately that he did not wish to interfere but felt this was an ill-time moment to announce new plans for withdrawal.

However, the situation in Commons and the Labor Party was in direct contrast to that in the U.S. Congress, where military spending has priority over domestic programs and the latter are the first targets in any economy drive. Cuts in British military spending were the price for the Laborite rank-and-file's acceptance of cutbacks at home.

The new austerity campaign is designed to back up the devaluation of the pound Nov. 18 and is based on the age - old British dictum that the island kingdom "must export or die."

It was drafted against a background of industrial stagnation, with unemployment last reported at 538,000, or 2.3 per cent of the working population.

Wilson's aim is two-fold: to shift $2.4 billion in national resources - money, manpower and nonessentials to production for export by fiscal 1970-71; and to mop up $1.2 billion to $1.4 billion in domestic purchasing power this year through taxation, restrictions on installment buying and possibly forced savings so that money cannot be spent on goods which should be exported.

Devaluation of the pound made British goods potentially competitive on world markets, and the purpose of the new program is to make the goods available for sale abroad.

Jones Tired Of Dirty Capitol

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R- Clayton, said today he was "sick of working in a dirty building."

He told John D. Paulus, director of planning and construction, he could take him out in the hallway and show that the walls are filthy.

"You couldn't rent a building as filthy as this one is in St. Louis," Jones said.

Paulus said his office has only recently discovered a solution that will clean the marble in the Capitol recently. He said some preparation used years ago almost ruined the marble.

But Jones said he wasn't talking about the marble - just the dirt on the painted walls. He offered to give Paulus the $750 allowed him to clean his senatorial office if that would be of any help.

"ALL YOU NEED," he said, "is one man. Give him a sponge and some soap and put him to work."

Victim Shoots Rapist to Death

ST. JOSEPH, MO. (AP) - A 19-year-old mother early today shot and killed a man who entered her home at Sugar Lake and raped her after threatening her and her 2-year-old son with a pistol, Buchanan County authorities reported.

The Buchanan County sheriff's office identified the dead man as Robert Edward Bennett, 23, of Atchison, Kan.

Pastsy Ann Goodpasture told authorities the man broke into her home near Rushville. She said he threatened her and the boy, and then raped her. She told police she grabbed the pistol and shot the man in the chest. He fled from the home and collapsed in a roadway where he died.

The woman said the man, a Negro, had been at her home several times previously to inspect a motor that her husband had for sale.

The husband, Henry Goodpasture, who is employed in the Fairfax area of Kansas City, arrived home from work about 20 minutes after the shooting.

Lake Ozark Liquor by Drink Vote Barred

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Atty. Gen. Norman H. Anderson ruled today the city of Lake Ozark, which has less than 500 inhabitants, may not hold an election on sale of liquor by the drink.

The 1967 legislature enacted a law allowing drink sales at large resorts and restaurants.

But Anderson said other laws limit liquor by the drink elections to cities of over 500 population.

In another opinion the attorney general held no neptism or conflict of interest is involved when a prosecuting attorney hires a county judge's daughter as his secretary.

Bell City School Robbed

BELL CITY -- The Bell City high school was broken into over the weekend, and $290 in cash taken from the two administrative offices.

How the thief or thieves entered has not been learned, according to Deputy Sheriff Cecil Hicks. No doors were pried open or glass broken.

The money was obtained by prying open a cabinet in the superintendent's office, where $105 was taken, and $185 from the principal's office.

Nothing else in the two offices was disturbed.

The loss was discovered Monday morning.

Strangling Inquest Opens

ST. LOUIS (AP) - The superintendent of the St. Louis State School and Hospital told a coroner's inquest today more employes would help diminish the possibility of circumstances that led to the strangulation deaths of three inmates.

Coroner Raymond Harris asked Dr. Cecil G. Baker of the hospital how many employes were on duty in Donnelly Hall last Wednesday morning when the inmates were strangled.

Dr. Baker told the coroner three people - two women and a man - were working the hall. He added that at least six people were needed in the building and that "more male employes would help." He cited low salaries as a reason the hospital has problems in keeping personnel.

The three inmates were found strangled with pieces of a bedsheet. County police said four inmates admitted strangling the young men and said they planned to kill more, but got tired and quit.

Marilyn Kruger, a registered nurse who works on the day shift at Donnelly Hall, told the inquest she found one of the victims and notified authorities. She said four or five more employes would make it possible for the staff to give adequate supervision.

In reply to questions, the nurse and Baker said there also were problems with six deviation. Both said additional personnel would help control that problem, too. The nurse said she felt additional recreational facilities were needed as the patients had too much idle time.

A woman, sho told the inquest she had a son at Donnelly Hall, testified that her son told her he and another boy tried to attract the attention of attendants Wednesday morning, but they were sent back to bed by a nurse.

Wright Quits as Director

PORTAGEVILLE -- A. W. Wright, director of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation, has submitted his resignation as director of the DAEOC board of directors.

The resignation will become effective as soon as the board has employed a new director.

Wright said his plans are indefinite but that he might continue to work in some phase of the poverty program.

Prior to coming to DAEOC, he was superintendent of schools at Illmo-Scott City 20 years, retiring in the spring of 1967. He has been DAEOC director since June.

Wright succeeded Bill Clare as director. Clare resigned to take a position with a school system to Illinois.

Prior to Clare the position of director was filled by acting co-directors, Lloyd Phillips and William Graves, who served in the capacity after DAEOC's first director, Earl Williams of Anniston, was discharged by the DAEOC board in August of 1966.

Phillips and Graves were discharged by the board last spring following a bitter dispute between the Kansas City regional Office of Economic Opportunity and the DAEOC board.

The director's salary is $12,000 a year.

Downtown Merchants Draft Constitution

A new constitution was drafted for the Downtown Merchants Association by five of its members in a special meeting last night in the Chamber of Commerce Office.

Details of the new constitution will be explained by five teams, composed of two merchants each, to each downtown merchant in the next 10 days. Team members will meet at 10 a.m. tomorrow at Luber's Restaurant to decide which merchants each team will visit.

The objective of the association was defined in the meeting last night. It is to promote the downtown area of Sikeston and develop good will in the Sikeston trade area.

Some of the rules set forth in the constitution include that all members shall be downtown merchants, that the Chamber of Commerce shall work cooperatively with the group on all promotions, that members shall cooperate on major promotions and that merchants shall urge employes to use off street parking.

Other rules dealt with the term of officers and the dues of members.

A general membership meeting will be held for the election of officers after all merchants are visited and the new constitution is explained, Richard Pinkerton, Chamber of Commerce manager said today.

Constitution committee members are Stanley Bush, Z. E. McAmis, Ed Rider, Venson "Shiek" Jones and Raymond Wright.

TVA Scores Victory In Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP)- The Tennessee Valley Authority won a major victory over a private power supplier, Kentucky Utilities, in the Supreme Court today.

The net result of the 6-1 decision is to authorize supply of TVA power to two small villages in Tennessee. But the issues go deeper than that, and the ruling, by Justice Hugo L. Black, firmly establishes TVA's right to determine the precise regions it may service under congressional authority.

Today's action undoubtedly will set the pattern for other cases in lower courts that deal similarly with extension of TVA power along its primary service area.

The ruling involved interpretation of an important amendment to the Tennessee Valley Authority Act in 1959. While authorizing TVA to raise money for expansion and development through the sale of bonds, Congress established some service rules.

TVA was allowed to supply power to the area for which it was the "primary" source on July 1, 1957. At the same time, it was barred from supplying municipalities within a five-mile peripheral area who were receiving power from private sources.

TVA contended Congress had left it to the TVA board to define exactly what was meant by the "primary" and the "peripheral" areas.

New Patrol Headquarters Sought

Special to Daily Standard

JEFFERSON CITY -- A request for $436,000 in state funds to build a new headquarters for troop E of the Missouri State Highway Patrol was made Monday in a capital improvements hearing before the house appropriations committee.

Col. E. I. "Mike" Hockaday, superintendent of the patrol, said today the present facility serving highway patrolmen in Southeast Missouri near Poplar Bluff has been outgrown.

When meetings are held there, girls on the staff are required to leave to make room for patrolmen, he said.

The present facility has 2,700 square feet. The new building is designed for 14,000 square feet, Hockaday said.

Another reason for the request is the fact the present facility at the outskirts of Poplar Bluff will be bypassed by highway 67 when it is extended in dual lanes to the south, he said.

It probably will be near the end of the 60-day special legislative session convened Friday before the outcome on the request is known as most appropriations bills are usually the last considered, Hockaday said.

If the money is allocated, the new headquarters building would be located on one of the most traveled highways in the troop E area. For the greatest efficiency of the office it should be located more centrally according to population and traffic in the area, Hockaday said.

Traffic and population factors apparently would weigh more heavily in locating the new office than a purely geographical center.

The Troop E area is bounded on the south by the Arkansas border, on the west by Ripley and Iron counties, on the north by Iron and Perry counties and on the east by the Mississippi river.

Hockaday also requested a $2 million allocation yesterday for the construction of a new State Highway Patrol Training Academy in Jefferson City. It would be an 80,000 square foot structure capable of training 120 men.

A new academy is needed to replace the one operating in Rolla, which has a 60-man training capacity.

Several police departments, including Sikeston, send men to the academy for training.

Some of the requests for training by police departments have to be delayed because of the space limitations and the need to train highway patrolmen at the academy.

Fiery Blast Follows Seaport Collision

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The freighter Christiana smashed into a string of gasoline-laden barges in the Houston Ship Channel today turning the water into a blazing inferno as the volatile fuel exploded in sheets of flame.

Two American tourists, the captain's wife and 3-year-old daughter, and 27 officers and crewmen scrambled into the ship's lifeboats and fled through the fiery waters. State police said they had no reports of serious injuries.

The collision occurred about 12:30 a.m. just south of a highway tunnel between the suburbs of Baytown and La Porte, which is 30 miles southeast of Houston.

The Christiane, a 372-foot craft of Liberian registry owned by Christiane Shipping Co. of Bermuda, was outbound toward Port Arthur, Tex., when it struck the barges being pushed by the tugboat Barbara Waxler.

One barge was empty but the other two bore 30,000 barrels of high octane gasoline which exploded, spraying fire across the chilly waters of Upper Galveston Bay.

Help was close by because rescue units along the heavily industralized waterway were still dealing with an explosion and fire that broke out two hours earlier and 12 miles upstream at a Shell Chemical Co. plant.

Israel Says Soviets Given Yugoslav Base

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - The Israeli newspaper Maariy reported today that Yugoslavia has given the Russians a naval base at the Adriatic port of Split to help support the Egyptian regime of President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

In Belgrade, a spokesman for the Yugoslav Foreign Ministry said the report is "without any foundation."

The paper's Paris correspondent said reliable foreign sources reported the agreement between President Tito and Soviet leaders has been kept secret, but observers have noted that Soviet warships sail regularly between Split and Eygptian ports.

The agreement was reached shortly before the Eygptians sank the Israeli destroyer Elath with a Soviet-built missile beat on Oct. 21, the paper said.

Maariy said its scources reported many Yugoslav leaders were critical of Tito's move, fearing it might threaten their independence from the Soviet Union.

At least three Soviet warships and submarines now dock regularly at Split, the report said, and housing and clubs have been opened for Soviet seamen.

Meanwhile, in the Gaza Strip near El Arish Monday night, an Israeli tank truck ran over an antivehicle mine, the Israeli army said the Tel Aviv. The blast damaged the truck and injured its driver, and a search was on today for the saboteurs responsible.

The Israeli army denied claims from Damascus by El Fatah terrorists that their units "heavily damaged" an Israeli potassium plant west of the Dead Sea Jan. 7. A spokesman said the plant had not been attacked.

Buses Collide, 5 Hurt

CHARLESTON -- One bus driver and four school children were injured, when two school buses collided on highway K, about four miles northeast of Charleston, today at 7:30 a.m.

Both buses were traveling east on the Big Lake Road, east of highway 77, when a 1967 bus owned by the Charleston R-1 district, and driven by Clyde Sanders, 64, Charleston, stopped to pick up children.

A second school bus, a 1967 Chevrolet, belonging to St. Henry's school, Charleston, driven by Delber Zoellner, 47, Charleston, did not see the first bus because of fog until he came close. He applied his brakes and his vehicle crashed into the rear of the other bus on the icy road.

Injured in the Charleston R-1 bus was the driver, cuts on his head, and a passenger, Ruby Rogers, 16, Charleston, possible concussion. Both of the injured were taken to Missouri Delta Community hospital in Sikeston.

In the St. Henry's Catholic school bus, the injured were passengers, from Charleston - Stephen Scheffer, 10, minor face cuts; Mary Striker, 9, cuts on her face, and David Barley, 13, minor cuts and teeth knocked out. All injured in this bus were treated in a Charleston clinic.

The highway patrol investigated but made no arrests.

At 8 a.m. today on route J, five miles southwest of Hayti, a two-car collision sent two men to the Pemiscot Memorial hospital in Hayti.

A 1961 Chevrolet, driven by Curtis Tipler, 36, Steele, was struck by a 1964 Chevrolet, driven by Robert Vaughn, 17, Steele, when the Vaughn car crossed over the center line and sideswiped the Tipler car.

Tipler received cuts on his face, and Vaughn a broken nose and face cuts.

Vaughn was given a summons for being on the wrong side of the road.

Both drivers escaped injury when two cars collided at 10:30 a.m. Monday on highway 61, two miles north of Marston.

A 1953 Chevrolet, driven by Roy Tillmon, 41, Marston, attemped to make a left turn, when his car was struck in the rear by a 1968 Buick, driven by Lawrence Hollenbeck, 63, Sikeston, the highway patrol reported.

Hatfield Speaker For Lincoln Day

KANSAS CITY (AP) - Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., will speak at the 68th Missouri Lincoln Day dinner Feb. 3 in Kansas City.

Speaking at the Republican Women's meeting at 11 a.m. the same day will be Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, Republican candidate for the U. S. Senate from St. Louis.

Lawrence K. Roos, St. Louis County supervisor and Republican candidate for governor, will address the Missouri Association of Republican Editors Feb. 2.

Paul L. Bradshaw of Springfield, president of the Missouri Association of Republicans, said tickets for the dinner are on sale.

Hatfield was keynote speaker and temporary chairman at the 1964 Republican national convention.

$300,000 More Needed for Hospital

The new wing of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital should be completed Feb. 1 and will make the facility "outstanding," Administrator Harold Jones reported to the Rotary club last night at the Rustic Rock Inn.

Jones made a progress report on construction of the new wing and renovation of the old building and appealed for financial assistance.

He said that the improvements will cost $3,100,000 of which $915,500 will be supplied by the federal government with $2,185,000 to be raised locally.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Coleman have contributed $1,130,000 to the undertaking, he said, and an additional $755,000 has been raised by contributions of others. A balance of $300,000 is needed and the hospital administrator urged "gifts from those who desire to help themselves and their families."

Jones said that the 90 beds the new wing provide are "vitally needed" and will be immediately used.

The hospital will have when completed a new, enlarged emergency department, which will provide better care with rooms for families and for police questioning in private; the radiological department will have three diagnostic rooms, special procedures rooms for rapid diagnosis, X-ray and deep therapy, isotope therapy, a complete physical therapy department with exercise areas and a class room for in-service program.

"The fresh air system will be brought up to date throughout the hospital," Jones said.

There will be four major operating rooms instead of two, intensive care space for heart patients and defices to measure brain and muscle damage.

The speaker was introduced by Sharron Pharris.

Gary Estes and David Miller were inducted as members of the club by Lennie Whitworth.

Fred Koch, president of the club, announced that the club was a 200 per cent contributor to the Rotary Foundation, which provides funds for study abroad. This means that the club has contributed $20 per member on the average to the foundation.

Fred Schultz, St. Louis, president of Canvas Products, was a visiting Rotarian. His guest was Jean Torrence, St. Louis, executive vice president of the company.

Charles Green led the singing accompanied by Kay Hawkins at the piano.

Mercury Dips Down to Four

A 36-degree range in temperatures occurred in Sikeston for the 24-hour period preceding 7:30 a.m. today.

The mercury plunged to four overnight after a reading of 40, high enough to make snow slushy, yesterday afternoon.

Fog contributed another hazard to slick streets this morning and a repeat appearance was forecast for tomorrow.

THIS SNOW SLIDE hangs from the garage roof of Lt. Col. George T. Johnson, retired army officer, and Mrs. Johnson at 403 Dorothy St. A four-inch layer of frozen snow is hanging over the roof 30 inches on the north side of the building.

THE SOUTH SIDE of the garage roof of Lt. Col. George T. Johnson, retired, and Mrs. Johnson came in for its share of the snow slide, too. Low temperatures held the slides in position.

Wilson Announces Withdrawal of British Armed Forces in Far East and Persian Gulf

LONDON (AP) - Prime Minister Harold Wilson announced today the withdrawal of all British armed forces from the Far East and the Persian Gulf by the end of 1971.

Unfolding his austerity program before the House of Commons, he also announced a campaign to slash benefits in social welfare.

Although the intention is to leave the Far East by 1971, Wilson said his government was prepared to continue aiding Britain's Commonwealth partners in Southeast Asia through a "joint air defense system for Malaysia and Singapore." Britain will also train personnel to operate the system.

Wilson announced cancellation of a contract to purchase 50 American F111 swing-wing bombers at a cost of $1.02 billion.

The prime minister was grim faced as he rose in the House of Commons to announce details of the Labor government's drive to make Britain solvent.

Princess Margaret was in the gallery sitting near Wilson's wife.

The prime minister said Britain's future foreign role will have to depend on its ability to pay.

"We have to come to terms with our role in the world," Wilson declared.

He told the House Britain will retain its bases in Europe from which forces can be deployed overseas in time of conflict.

The prime minister said the F111 cancellation will mean a saving to this country of $960 million even when penalty costs for cancellation are taken into consideration.

His announcement of the cancellation brought cheers from Labor benches in the House.

Wilson's austerity package was the result of more than 30 hours of tough wrangling within his government over the past week.

"Our purpose in this review is to make devaluation (of the pound) work because until we do, until we are earning year in, year out, substantial surplus on overseas payments, we are unable internally or externally to do all the things which as a nation we would like to do," the prime minister said.

"Abroad it means reassessing our role in the world and realistically limiting commitments and outgoings to our true capacity."

Wilson's statement will be followed by a two-day debate, beginning Wednesday. At its conclusion Thursday will come a vote of confidence in which the government is assured of victory by the Labor party's Commons majority of 85 votes. But Wilson may have to accept the resignation of a minister or two whose favorite projects were treated especially rough.

Regardless of how Labor's left wing may howl at the cuts in the social services, no sizable segment of the party is going to precipitate a revolt which would force the government to face a general election it would be certain to lose. This means that Wilson does not have to call an election for another three years, and he is banking on getting Britain into the black before then, a miracle that would insure the Laborities another lease on the government.

Wilson and the Cabinet decided to speed up the withdrawal from Southeast Asia and the Persian Gulf despite pleas for delay from Washington and the four Commonwealth partners in the region - Malaysia, Singapore, Australia and New Zealand. President Johnson wrote Wilson privately that he did not wish to interfere but felt this was an ill-time moment to announce new plans for withdrawal.

However, the situation in Commons and the Labor Party was in direct contrast to that in the U.S. Congress, where military spending has priority over domestic programs and the latter are the first targets in any economy drive. Cuts in British military spending were the price for the Laborite rank-and-file's acceptance of cutbacks at home.

The new austerity campaign is designed to back up the devaluation of the pound Nov. 18 and is based on the age - old British dictum that the island kingdom "must export or die."

It was drafted against a background of industrial stagnation, with unemployment last reported at 538,000, or 2.3 per cent of the working population.

Wilson's aim is two-fold: to shift $2.4 billion in national resources - money, manpower and nonessentials to production for export by fiscal 1970-71; and to mop up $1.2 billion to $1.4 billion in domestic purchasing power this year through taxation, restrictions on installment buying and possibly forced savings so that money cannot be spent on goods which should be exported.

Devaluation of the pound made British goods potentially competitive on world markets, and the purpose of the new program is to make the goods available for sale abroad.

Jones Tired Of Dirty Capitol

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R- Clayton, said today he was "sick of working in a dirty building."

He told John D. Paulus, director of planning and construction, he could take him out in the hallway and show that the walls are filthy.

"You couldn't rent a building as filthy as this one is in St. Louis," Jones said.

Paulus said his office has only recently discovered a solution that will clean the marble in the Capitol recently. He said some preparation used years ago almost ruined the marble.

But Jones said he wasn't talking about the marble - just the dirt on the painted walls. He offered to give Paulus the $750 allowed him to clean his senatorial office if that would be of any help.

"ALL YOU NEED," he said, "is one man. Give him a sponge and some soap and put him to work."

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Congress' haste to pass legislation to increase salaries of postal and other federal employes and the pay of those serving in the armed services certainly makes political sense.

This is a presidential election year.

President Lyndon B. Johnson is in several different kinds of political trouble and Democrats in Congress running on the same ticket are restless.

But hasty action can backfire.

The publicity mills of the post office department worked overtime to prepare the people on short notice for the postal increase which went into effect Sunday.

The people responded better than the post office department.

Throughout the country there was a shameful lack of preparation in the post office. For days there were no one-cent stamps. As stopgap measures post office patrons spliced their available supplies of fives with stamps costing fractions more than one cent.

Few people have in their possesion any stamp combination which adds up to six cents. Old air mail stamps don't produce it. Neither does a combination of the four-cent stamps formerly used on post cards.

A few screwballs, who saved three-cent stamps from the time not so many years ago when they moved a letter through the mails or who hoarded one-centers from their postcard days may have been the best prepared for the most recent postal increase.

The increase put through so foolishly and so hastily by the politically inspired and politically afraid Congress allowed no time to change the vending machines in the post office lobby. They still spew out five-cent and four-cent stamps.

One of the results is that postal employes must spend more time than desirable in stamping "postage due" on mail lacking the proper postage and mail receivers must shell out more pennies than normally for mail with insufficient postage.

This adds up to an annoyance, irritation and inconvenience for many Americans, including postal employes, which could have been avoided if Congress had shown a little rare common sense, a bit more consideration for their constituents and hadn't been shaking with political tremors.

"A prospect does not normally buy the best value he can afford. He must be sold on the idea of choosing the best. . ."

This is the opinion of a real estate man who has sold thousands of homes.

"The family looking for a new home usually wants something just slightly better than the house they are leaving. They feel a little guilty and unsure about choosing something a great deal better, even though the price may be practically the same."

Salesmen of items ranging from shoes to automobiles have noted the same tendency on the part of buyers to lag behind their means.

It is difficult to sell a fine pair of shoes to a customer who is accustomed to destroying a pair of cheap shoes every few months. Yet, over a period of a year the good shoes would be far less expensive, more comfortable, and more attractive.

"Consumer lag" is especially evident among newly affluent shoppers. Since a large portion of the American public is newly affluent, the problem of helping the consumer to distinguish between value and mere price has become a major function of retail advertising.

It is not easy to convince a new public it is good economics to spend more for quality. The benefits may be long range, intangible, or technical in nature.

The medium used for selling the idea of quality must be one which provides for unlimited presentation of facts, factual comparisons, and sound logic. It must be one in which the public has proven faith.

Because the local newspaper is such a medium, the builders of new and better homes depend upon newspaper advertising as the major means of informing and locating new prospects.

You're driving along a country highway on a beautiful sun-shiny day, and thoroughly enjoying it. Traffic is light, so you're driving right at the speed limit. An experienced driver, you're alert to the road and the world around you.

Suddenly a car pulls out from a side road into your lane of traffic. The road had been partially hidden by the tall corn along the side of the road, and you saw the other car just long enough to know that it hadn't stopped.

You try to stop, but end up slamming into the rear of the other car.

Who's at fault? You, for driving too fast for conditions? Possibly.

The other guy, for failing to yield the right-of-way? Possibly, but there was no stop or yield sign at the intersection.

It would seem that either driver would have a legitimate gripe against being found "negligent" in this accident, but SOMEBODY must be at fault, right?

Right! And it might very well be the local government that had the responsibility for maintenance of that intersection.

In accident cases involving inadequate traffic controls, the courts are increasingly finding municipalities liable for the victims' damages. If it were proved that a stop or yield sign was needed at this intersection, the courts could hold the local government liable.

Municipalities have been found liable in recent accident cases in Washington state, where the judgment was $16,000, in New York state ($67,-500 and $66,000), in Kentucky ($5,000) and in California ($1,000, settled out of court).

In an accident case last year in Wisconsin involving the collision of two cars at an intersection where a stop sign was missing, Rock County was sued for $1,000,000 by one of the victims. Had the county been assessed that amount by the court, its residents would have had to pay the judgment through a bond issue or increased taxes.

The danger that inadequate traffic signs pose to you as a driver is obvious. More subtle is the danger they pose to you as a taxpayer.

It's far cheaper to pay taxes for good traffic signs than it is to pay taxes to settle a large accident liability claim, and it's partially up to you to convince your city, county or state government of this.

FOR THE COPELAND PLAN

This newspaper once again expresses its support of a reapportionment plan that will once again be offered to the Missouri General Assembly by New Madrid County State Representative Fred (Gene) Copeland. The Copeland plan, which will be offered as a place of beginning for the state legislature in its quest for court-acceptable redistricting, includes Texas County -- the home county of U.S. Rep. Richard Ichord of Houston, Mo.

As readers may recall, this newspaper supported Rep. Copeland's previous attempt to include Texas County in the Tenth Congressional District, but the proposal met with defeat, primarily because of the political pressure exerted by would-be Congressional candidates from Southeast Missouri.

Now that the federal court has again thrown out the legislature's attempt to redistrict the state, it appears as if Rep. Copeland's proposal, when the General Assembly convenes this week, may have a better chance.

It deserves that chance.

Although a good many Southeast Missouri politicians raised their eyebrows at Rep. Copeland's plan, it has considerable merit, the most important being that it establishes a precedent for moving the Tenth Congressional District to the west and not to the north. And this is the proper direction for the Tenth to move.

We say this because we are convinced that if the Tenth district ever moves to the north, we will eventually if not quickly, have to include Jefferson County, a semi-metropolitan county south of St. Louis that is predominantly union-dominated and which plays its politics with a curruptness not unlike metropolitan St. Louis. Although Jefferson County is Democratic, it is a different kind of Democratic cat that inhabits those environs. There is no similarity, except in name, between Bootheel Democrats and Jefferson County Democrats.

If the Tenth district is permitted to move west, it will encompass some counties that, while Republican, would hardly constitute a sizeable minority in the heavily-Democratic Tenth district.

The plan has been and will be opposed by Southeast Missouri Democrats who don't like the idea of moving U.S. Rep. Ichord into this district. We hold no brief for Rep. Ichord and certainly are not committed to furthering his political career. If he wins nomination in the Tenth, it will have to be on his own merits and not because he happens to be an incumbent Congressman. In our opinion, Rep. Ichord faces as great a danger in being moved into the Tenth district as the Tenth faces in having him come in.

As we said during the last session of the General Assembly, we hope the Copeland proposal is accepted. Whether it gains approval depends, in the final analysis, on whether Southeast Missouri Democrats choose to look at the future of the Tenth district or whether they are content to accept the expedient as a way to furthering individual political careers.

Missouri experienced a reduction in traffic deaths in 1967 as compared to the previous year. The State had not recorded a decrease of vehicular fatalities over a previous year since 1961.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol reports that the traffic fatality toll for the last year is 1,308. Late deaths resulting from injuries sustained in traffic accidents during the past year will be added to the toll. A total of 1,379 persons died on Missouri streets and highways in 1966 ... a record.

The Highway Patrol's Division of Safety made a brief study of last year's traffic deaths: There were 1,005 traffic fatalities in the rural areas of the State and 303 in urban traffic; The number of pedestrians killed totaled 170 ... ten more than in 1966; Forty - eight persons died in vehicular accidents at railroad crossings. Every month of 1967 recorded at least one or more fatalities at these locations; The number of multiple death accidents decreased from 169 in 1966 to 155 for last year.

The Patrol also found that the first six months of 1967 recorded a lower traffic toll than the last half of the year. There were 594 persons killed in the State from January thru June. During the final six months of the year, 714 lives were lost in Missouri traffic.

Regardless of the improved Missouri traffic toll, the Highway Patrol warned motorists of becoming overconfident. Captain F. W. Shadwell, head of the Patrol's Division of Safety, said, "The publicity given to the improved 1967 traffic death record could be a forerunner of a tragic death toll in the next few weeks. Traffic dangers have not decreased in the least. The driver who becomes overconfident at the wheel is in danger of losing his life."

Devaluation of the British pound will undoubtedly have both an immediate and long range effect on American independent business, the research staff of the National Federation of Independent Business believes.

The immediate affect is the raising of interest rates by Federal Reserve Board action to offset the decline of the pound. A special computer run of the 5,742 respondents to the Federation continuous field survey for the first half of November shows that the average interest rate being paid by independent firms has jumped to 6.8 per cent, up from 6.5 per cent in October and higher than the 6.7 per cent average rate that prevailed in the first and third quarters of the year. In the second quarter there was a dip to 6.6 per cent.

The November interest rate was from data received prior to the Federal Reserve Board action which will undoubtedly further increase the rate. It may also further dampen applications for loans from small business which has dropped from 42 per cent seeking loans the first of the year to 36 per cent.

The long range impact remains to be seen, as with almost a 15 per cent cut in British prices created by the drop in the pound, it is possible that England will become the discount house of the world.

The Federation surveys show that some 22 per cent of the nation's approximately 500,000 smaller manufacturers have been exporting, and about 4 per cent of the same number are also engaged in wholesaling.

Whether or not the lower prices on British goods will cut into this business remains to be seen, as well as the possible impact of cheaper British imports into the U. S. on independent manufacturers' domestic volume.

BLACK POWER IS ANSWERED

The elections of the nation's first Negro major-city mayors in Cleveland, Ohio, and Gary, Ind., are not Negro victories. They were victories FOR the Negro, and because of this, are victories for the entire community.

It took white votes -- a great many white votes -- in addition to Negro votes to make Carl B. Stokes and Richard G. Hatcher the first of their race to win the top elective job in their respective cities.

In Boston, where Negroes are a much smaller minority than in Cleveland or Gary, white voters decisively rejected a white mayoral candidate who pitched her bid for office on a reactionary racial basis.

This is the answer to "Black Power," with its cry of separation from, it not outright war against, the "white establishment." This is democracy's answer.

Nov. 7, 1967, should make it clear to all which route -- riots and revolts or constructive politics and co-operation -- will eventually lead to equal citizenship and equal opportunity for all Americans.

The uniqueness of the English language is ever intriguing. The word 'polish' becomes 'Polish' --same spelling, different meaning and different pronunciation -- by the use of a capital letter. E. A. Enstrom of Greensburg, Pa., wonders if there are any other such words.

The answer is there are so many words of this type that a special word is used to identify them. There are called 'homonyms.' As the dictionary explains, a homonym is a word like another in sound or spelling, but different in meaning.

Thus we have meet and meat. We also have bow (bo) as bow and arrow, and bow (bou) the forward end of a ship or airplane. We have a row of seats, a row in the street, and to row a boat. And then we have privy, a legal term, and privy, an outhouse.

Cleave is a word that has two diametrically opposite meanings. It means to adhere closely, to cling; it also means to part, divide, or separate. Other such words are sanction and invaluable. They are called antonyms.

On-the-go businessmen have finally been freed from the chains, or rather, wires that have bound them to fixed telephones, thanks to the first completely lightweight, portable telephone requiring no connections.

Called Portable Executive Telephone (PET), the device has received acceptance from the Federal Communications Commission after three years of research and development.

The transistorized unit weighs less than eleven pounds and provides direct service to any regular telephone virtually anywhere in the world. PET enables its owner to make and receive calls in vehicles or while walking according to Michael J. Why?

The indications are they, like the Negro spiritual leaders, have woke up to the fact that they are being used by the conspiracy that is shaping up our nation to become a police state dictatorship. "Divide and Conquer." Divide along political lines, race lines, any lines. Seems like about the only unfinished biz just now is to change our Constitution to where it will permit disarming the people, do away with the secret ballot, permit the conspiracy to name candidates the people have to vote for, give the military control over all citizens in all categories through political bosses, tax the churches out of existance, make war all over the world and cast all into prison on trumped up charges. NEEDS OF VIETNAM POLICY

Public opinion polls throughout the country indicate that U. S. citizens are dissatisfied with our policy in Vietnam. Each year more troops are requested, but victory seems no closer. Echoing this discontent, Congressional leaders are questioning the wisdom of a strategy which is not committed to victory.

The Senate Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee issued a unanimous report on the conduct of the air war in Vietnam. This report indicates that despite its enormous technological capability, the U. S. is not putting it to effective use.

The Subcommittee report states that the air campaign has been seriously hampered by "fragmentation of our air power by overly restrictive controls, limitations, and the doctrine of 'gradualism' placed on our aviation forces." The Subcommittee also heard testimony that the Defense Department leadership has ignored the advice of those on the scene regarding which targets, because of their strategic importance to the Viet Cong, should be attacked.

Another section of the report stated: "All military witnesses stated that the closure, neutralization or isolation of the port of Haiphong was the single most important thing which could be done in North Vietnam from a military standpoint." Yet the Defense Department has consistently refused to approve any such action against Haiphong.

If the citizens of this Republic are to continue to pay the cost of the war in terms of money and lives, they deserve the assurance that every necessary step to win it is being taken. The Defense Department should follow the advice of its best men and dedicate itself to a policy of victory. HLH

NEW YORK (AP) -- Are you forging ahead or falling behind in the old rat race?

Just as you go to the doctor for an annual physical overhaul, it is wise to give your status a periodic checkup, for in our civilization a fellow who has lost his status is in a social graveyard -- whether he knows it or not.

But how can one be sure, since sometimes even your best friend won't tell you?

Well, here's a simple status test gratis. You're still climbing up the ladder, if --

You have more credit cards in your wallet than you do pictures of your family.

Other guys in the office washroom stand respectfully aside when you reach for a towel to dry your hands.

You received 10 more Christmas cards last year than you did the year before.

The bookies call you to see if you want to place any racetrack bets instead of waiting for you to phone them.

Either you take a winter vacation in Florida or manage -- sometime between the first of January and the middle of March -- to attend an important business convention in Arizona, Honolulu, Puerto Rico or the Bahamas.

Whereas formerly you used to take your family ice skating at a local pond, you now take them for a weekend at a ski resort.

You are considering taking up pole because the people you meet on golf links these days seem to have become so dreadfully common. Naturally, you gave away your bowling ball long ago.

Most of the groceries your family consumes are delivered to the rear door, and you settle the bill by check.

Your wife puts in more time at her hairdresser's than she used to spend shopping for bargains at the supermarket.

The reason that you don't make an annual contribution to your college's alumni fund isn't that you can't afford to -- it's because of annoyance that you haven't been elected yet to the board of trustees.

If there are any leftovers in your refrigerator, the maid is the one who has to eat them.

The gin you drink in your martinis is bottled for you by a snobbish little old boozemaker in Britain who sells only to a clientele that has been especially recommended.

When you pet dog gets sick, you don't take him to the veterinarian. You are so important that the veterinarian makes a house call.

The house you live in has more bathrooms than the number of rooms in the house you were born in.

Instead of playing the numbers game, you now play the stock market. You like to brag when you make a killing even though, as you admit ruefully to close friends, "it'll only muddy my tax picture."

In your home you keep a pistol and rifle hidden, just in case the Communists should change their tactics and attack the outer suburbs where you live.

Now and then you wonder whether the game is worth the candle.

Brother, you don't have to worry about lack of status. Your problem is to keep from being suffocated by status.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY:

LBJ readies bill to ensure clean fish; lax inspection has produced health hazards; fish state senator is consumers' champion.

WASHINGTON - President Johnson, who has turned out to be the most vigorous consumers' champion ever to sit in the White House, is preparing another food inspection bill. This one will protect the housewife from unsanitary fish.

Despite vigorous lobbying and a reluctant house of representatives, the senate, with a lot of White House help, last year put across a strong meat inspection bill. However, fish is still very sloppily inspected, and the President proposes to remedy the situation.

The American people eat 11 pounds of fish per capita each year -- a total of two billion pounds. Of this, 50 per cent is imported from 110 foreign countries, and is now uninspected. Some countries will permit American inspectors to look over their plants if they are sending sizable amounts of fish to the USA, but the Food and Drug Administration hasn't enough funds to do the inspecting.

It even lacks sufficient inspectors to adequately check on the 2,-200 fish processing plants and caneries which operate in interstate commerce in the United States. These plants are inspected only about once a year, if that often.

In addition, there are 1,500 intrastate processing plants and canneries not subject to federal inspection. State inspection in some states is lax or nonexistent.

Meanwhile fish have presented several health hazards, which on occasion have caused death or epidemics. One was the well-known case of Botulism which started from eating spoiled smoked salmon in Ohio and Michigan, and caused several deaths. Cases of hepatitis have also been traced to shellfish dredged from too near sewage outlets.

Finally, there is fish spoilage due to poor temperatures, causing salmonella or nausea.

Another problem has been the use of antibiotics to remedy fish spoilage. All of this has been impossible to check by the small staff of food and drug inspectors, even when they have jurisdiction.

FISHERMAN'S CHAMPION

There is also the question of inspecting 72,000 fishing vessels for health and sanitation.

To remedy this, the White House is drafting a tough fish inspection act giving more authority to the Food and Drug administration, arger staffs and federal jurisdiction over intrastate canneries and processing plants, unless and until individual states bolster their own inspection.

One interesting fact about the fish inspection proposal is that the champion consumers' guardian on Capitol Hill is long-time bachelor Sen. Warren Magnuson, who comes from one of the biggest fishing states, Washington. One of his best political friends and backers is Nick Bex, an old poker - playing pal of Harry Truman's.

Ignoring the opposition of the fishing industry, Magnuson is going to introduce the President's fish inspection bill, and will push it through his senate commerce committee.

He is convinced that, despite some protests, healthy fish will be the biggest boon to fishermen in the long run. Housewives who buy poor quality or spoiled fish are inclined not to buy it again.

Magnuson has been working with the Russians and the Japanese to protect American salmon, halibut, and the big fishing banks off both coasts of America. He will compile this with a forthright fish inspection bill to revitalize the entire fishing industry.

LBJ AND BABIES

Unless he changes his mind at the last minute, President (grandfather) Johnson will make a strong appeal in his state of the Union Message tomorrow (Wed.) for a program to reduce infant mortality. He is alarmed over the shocking fact that the United States, though the fourth largest nation in the world, ranks 14th in the death of babies.

The President has told aides he will urge congress to take care of impoverished mothers and their newborn. His hope is to provide adequate care for the mothers during pregnancy and infants for their first year. Most infant mortalities occur, according to statistics, in these crucial first 12 months.

The appeal to do something about infant mortality will be only part of a renewed call for welfare programs for his great society. He is particularly eager to spur research on improving medicines and hospital care.

EXIT THE GOOD DOCTOR?

It looks as if Dr. James L. Goddard, well-intentioned food and drug administrator, might be talking himself out of a job.

First he got quoted around the country last summer as saying he wouldn't object if his daughter smoked marijuana; indicating that smoking pot was not harmful to high school students.

Later he made a prediction that the small family drugstore was on the way out -- not a happy remark for the vice-president of the United States. Hubert Humphrey, the nation's no. 1 druggist, was born over his family drugstore in Huron, S.D., and still owns part of it.

More recently, food and drug agents seized 16 million weight-reducing pills produced by Western Laboratories of Denver, despite the fact that the pills had been sold by Western Research for more than 30 years and manufactured under the regulations and inspection of FDA. The FDA has had labels in its possession for seven years bearing the exact ingredients which it now considers "dangerous to health when used in the frequency and duration prescribed, recommended and suggested in their labeling." This is the charge now leveled at Western Research by FDA district director Fred Lofsvold in Denver.

If the pills were suddenly found dangerous for fat-reducing, as now alleged, the question is why this recent development couldn't have been imparted to the drug officials instead of staging a spectacular 16-million-pill raid, with U.S. marshals.

Dr. Goddard is reported on his way out.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Congress' haste to pass legislation to increase salaries of postal and other federal employes and the pay of those serving in the armed services certainly makes political sense.

This is a presidential election year.

President Lyndon B. Johnson is in several different kinds of political trouble and Democrats in Congress running on the same ticket are restless.

But hasty action can backfire.

The publicity mills of the post office department worked overtime to prepare the people on short notice for the postal increase which went into effect Sunday.

The people responded better than the post office department.

Throughout the country there was a shameful lack of preparation in the post office. For days there were no one-cent stamps. As stopgap measures post office patrons spliced their available supplies of fives with stamps costing fractions more than one cent.

Few people have in their possesion any stamp combination which adds up to six cents. Old air mail stamps don't produce it. Neither does a combination of the four-cent stamps formerly used on post cards.

A few screwballs, who saved three-cent stamps from the time not so many years ago when they moved a letter through the mails or who hoarded one-centers from their postcard days may have been the best prepared for the most recent postal increase.

The increase put through so foolishly and so hastily by the politically inspired and politically afraid Congress allowed no time to change the vending machines in the post office lobby. They still spew out five-cent and four-cent stamps.

One of the results is that postal employes must spend more time than desirable in stamping "postage due" on mail lacking the proper postage and mail receivers must shell out more pennies than normally for mail with insufficient postage.

This adds up to an annoyance, irritation and inconvenience for many Americans, including postal employes, which could have been avoided if Congress had shown a little rare common sense, a bit more consideration for their constituents and hadn't been shaking with political tremors.

"A prospect does not normally buy the best value he can afford. He must be sold on the idea of choosing the best. . ."

This is the opinion of a real estate man who has sold thousands of homes.

"The family looking for a new home usually wants something just slightly better than the house they are leaving. They feel a little guilty and unsure about choosing something a great deal better, even though the price may be practically the same."

Salesmen of items ranging from shoes to automobiles have noted the same tendency on the part of buyers to lag behind their means.

It is difficult to sell a fine pair of shoes to a customer who is accustomed to destroying a pair of cheap shoes every few months. Yet, over a period of a year the good shoes would be far less expensive, more comfortable, and more attractive.

"Consumer lag" is especially evident among newly affluent shoppers. Since a large portion of the American public is newly affluent, the problem of helping the consumer to distinguish between value and mere price has become a major function of retail advertising.

It is not easy to convince a new public it is good economics to spend more for quality. The benefits may be long range, intangible, or technical in nature.

The medium used for selling the idea of quality must be one which provides for unlimited presentation of facts, factual comparisons, and sound logic. It must be one in which the public has proven faith.

Because the local newspaper is such a medium, the builders of new and better homes depend upon newspaper advertising as the major means of informing and locating new prospects.

You're driving along a country highway on a beautiful sun-shiny day, and thoroughly enjoying it. Traffic is light, so you're driving right at the speed limit. An experienced driver, you're alert to the road and the world around you.

Suddenly a car pulls out from a side road into your lane of traffic. The road had been partially hidden by the tall corn along the side of the road, and you saw the other car just long enough to know that it hadn't stopped.

You try to stop, but end up slamming into the rear of the other car.

Who's at fault? You, for driving too fast for conditions? Possibly.

The other guy, for failing to yield the right-of-way? Possibly, but there was no stop or yield sign at the intersection.

It would seem that either driver would have a legitimate gripe against being found "negligent" in this accident, but SOMEBODY must be at fault, right?

Right! And it might very well be the local government that had the responsibility for maintenance of that intersection.

In accident cases involving inadequate traffic controls, the courts are increasingly finding municipalities liable for the victims' damages. If it were proved that a stop or yield sign was needed at this intersection, the courts could hold the local government liable.

Municipalities have been found liable in recent accident cases in Washington state, where the judgment was $16,000, in New York state ($67,500 and $66,000), in Kentucky ($5,000) and in California ($1,000, settled out of court).

In an accident case last year in Wisconsin involving the collision of two cars at an intersection where a stop sign was missing, Rock County was sued for $1,000,000 by one of the victims. Had the county been assessed that amount by the court, its residents would have had to pay the judgment through a bond issue or increased taxes.

The danger that inadequate traffic signs pose to you as a driver is obvious. More subtle is the danger they pose to you as a taxpayer.

It's far cheaper to pay taxes for good traffic signs than it is to pay taxes to settle a large accident liability claim, and it's partially up to you to convince your city, county or state government of this.

FOR THE COPELAND PLAN

This newspaper once again expresses its support of a reapportionment plan that will once again be offered to the Missouri General Assembly by New Madrid County State Representative Fred (Gene) Copeland. The Copeland plan, which will be offered as a place of beginning for the state legislature in its quest for court-acceptable redistricting, includes Texas County -- the home county of U.S. Rep. Richard Ichord of Houston, Mo.

As readers may recall, this newspaper supported Rep. Copeland's previous attempt to include Texas County in the Tenth Congressional District, but the proposal met with defeat, primarily because of the political pressure exerted by would-be Congressional candidates from Southeast Missouri.

Now that the federal court has again thrown out the legislature's attempt to redistrict the state, it appears as if Rep. Copeland's proposal, when the General Assembly convenes this week, may have a better chance.

It deserves that chance.

Although a good many Southeast Missouri politicians raised their eyebrows at Rep. Copeland's plan, it has considerable merit, the most important being that it establishes a precedent for moving the Tenth Congressional District to the west and not to the north. And this is the proper direction for the Tenth to move.

We say this because we are convinced that if the Tenth district ever moves to the north, we will eventually if not quickly, have to include Jefferson County, a semi-metropolitan county south of St. Louis that is predominantly union-dominated and which plays its politics with a curruptness not unlike metropolitan St. Louis. If he wins nomination in the Tenth, it will have to be on his own merits and not because he happens to be an incumbent Congressman. In our opinion, Rep. Ichord faces as great a danger in being moved into the Tenth district as the Tenth faces in having him come in.

As we said during the last session of the General Assembly, we hope the Copeland proposal is accepted. Whether it gains approval depends, in the final analysis, on whether Southeast Missouri Democrats choose to look at the future of the Tenth district or whether they are content to accept the expedient as a way to furthering individual political careers.

The elections of the nation's first Negro major-city mayors in Cleveland, Ohio, and Gary, Ind., are not Negro victories. They were victories FOR the Negro, and because of this, are victories for the entire community.

It took white votes -- a great many white votes -- in addition to Negro votes to make Carl B. Stokes and Richard G. Hatcher the first of their race to win the top elective job in their respective cities.

In Boston, where Negroes are a much smaller minority than in Cleveland or Gary, white voters decisively rejected a white mayoral candidate who pitched her bid for office on a reactionary racial basis.

This is the answer to "Black Power," with its cry of separation from, it not outright war against, the "white establishment." This is democracy's answer.

Nov. 7, 1967, should make it clear to all which route -- riots and revolts or constructive politics and co-operation -- will eventually lead to equal citizenship and equal opportunity for all Americans.

The uniqueness of the English language is ever intriguing. The word 'polish' becomes 'Polish' --same spelling, different meaning and different pronunciation -- by the use of a capital letter. E. A. Enstrom of Greensburg, Pa., wonders if there are any other such words.

The answer is there are so many words of this type that a special word is used to identify them. There are called 'homonyms.' As the dictionary explains, a homonym is a word like another in sound or spelling, but different in meaning.

Thus we have meet and meat. We also have bow (bo) as bow and arrow, and bow (bou) the forward end of a ship or airplane. We have a row of seats, a row in the street, and to row a boat. And then we have privy, a legal term, and privy, an outhouse.

Cleave is a word that has two diametrically opposite meanings. It means to adhere closely, to cling; it also means to part, divide, or separate. Other such words are sanction and invaluable. They are called antonyms.

PORTABLE PHONE AIDS SALESMEN

On-the-go businessmen have finally been freed from the chains, or rather, wires that have bound them to fixed telephones, thanks to the first completely lightweight, portable telephone requiring no connections.

Called Portable Executive Telephone (PET), the device has received acceptance from the Federal Communications Commission after three years of research and development.

The transistorized unit weighs less than eleven pounds and provides direct service to any regular telephone virtually anywhere in the world. PET enables its owner to make and receive calls in vehicles or while walking according to Michael J. Minahan, executive vice president and general manager of Portatronic Systems, Inc., which is distributing the portable telephone.

Apparently top white spiritual leaders are pulling their punches on commies.

Why?

The indications are they, like the Negro spiritual leaders, have woke up to the fact that they are being used by the conspiracy that is shaping up our nation to become a police state dictatorship. "Divide and Conquer." Divide along political lines, race lines, any lines. Seems like about the only unfinished biz just now is to change our Constitution to where it will permit disarming the people, do away with the secret ballot, permit the conspiracy to name candidates the people have to vote for, give the military control over all citizens in all categories through political bosses, tax the churches out of existance, make war all over the world and cast all into prison on trumped up charges. Who dare to protest, and all of this is just the beginning.

H.L. Hunt Says

NEEDS OF VIETNAM POLICY

Public opinion polls throughout the country indicate that U. S. citizens are dissatisfied with our policy in Vietnam. Each year more troops are requested, but victory seems no closer. Echoing this discontent, Congressional leaders are questioning the wisdom of a strategy which is not committed to victory.

The Senate Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee issued a unanimous report on the conduct of the air war in Vietnam. This report indicates that despite its enormous technological capability, the U. S. is not putting it to effective use.

The Subcommittee report states that the air campaign has been seriously hampered by "fragmentation of our air power by overly restrictive controls, limitations, and the doctrine of 'gradualism' placed on our aviation forces." The Subcommittee also heard testimony that the Defense Department leadership has ignored the advice of those on the scene regarding which targets, because of their strategic importance to the Viet Cong, should be attacked.

Another section of the report stated: "All military witnesses stated that the closure, neutralization or isolation of the port of Haiphong was the single most important thing which could be done in North Vietnam from a military standpoint." Yet the Defense Department has consistently refused to approve any such action against Haiphong.

If the citizens of this Republic are to continue to pay the cost of the war in terms of money and lives, they deserve the assurance that every necessary step to win it is being taken. The Defense Department should follow the advice of its best men and dedicate itself to a policy of victory. HLH

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) -- Are you forging ahead or falling behind in the old rat race?

Just as you go to the doctor for an annual physical overhaul, it is wise to give your status a periodic checkup, for in our civilization a fellow who has lost his status is in a social graveyard -- whether he knows it or not.

But how can one be sure, since sometimes even your best friend won't tell you?

Well, here's a simple status test gratis. You're still climbing up the ladder, if --

You have more credit cards in your wallet than you do pictures of your family.

Other guys in the office washroom stand respectfully aside when you reach for a towel to dry your hands.

You received 10 more Christmas cards last year than you did the year before.

The bookies call you to see if you want to place any racetrack bets instead of waiting for you to phone them.

Either you take a winter vacation in Florida or manage -- sometime between the first of January and the middle of March -- to attend an important business convention in Arizona, Honolulu, Puerto Rico or the Bahamas.

Whereas formerly you used to take your family ice skating at a local pond, you now take them for a weekend at a ski resort.

You are considering taking up pole because the people you meet on golf links these days soem to have become so dreadfully common. Naturally, you gave away your bowling ball long ago.

Most of the groceries your family consumes are delivered to the rear door, and you settle the bill by check.

Your wife puts in more time at her hairdresser's than she used to spend shopping for bargains at the supermarket.

The reason that you don't make an annual contribution to your college's alumni fund isn't that you can't afford to -- it's because of annoyance that you haven't been elected yet to the board of trustees.

If there are any leftovers in your refrigerator, the maid is the one who has to eat them.

The gin you drink in your martinis is bottled for you by a snobbish little old boozemaker in Britain who sells only to a clientele that has been especially recommended.

When you pet dog gets sick, you don't take him to the veterinarian. You are so important that the veterinarian makes a house call.

The house you live in has more bathrooms than the number of rooms in the house you were born in.

Instead of playing the numbers game, you now play the stock market. You like to brag when you make a killing even though, as you admit ruefully to close friends, "it'll only muddy my tax picture."

In your home you keep a pistol and rifle hidden, just in case the Communists should change their tactics and attack the outer suburbs where you live.

Now and then you wonder whether the game is worth the candle.

Brother, you don't have to worry about lack of status. Your problem is to keep from being suffocated by status.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY:

LBJ readies bill to ensure clean fish; lax inspection has produced health hazards; fish state senator is consumers' champion.

WASHINGTON - President Johnson, who has turned out to be the most vigorous consumers' champion ever to sit in the White House, is preparing another food inspection bill. This one will protect the housewife from unsanitary fish.

Despite vigorous lobbying and a reluctant house of representatives, the senate, with a lot of White House help, last year put across a strong meat inspection bill. However, fish is still very sloppily inspected, and the President proposes to remedy the situation.

The American people eat 11 pounds of fish per capita each year -- a total of two billion pounds. Of this, 50 per cent is imported from 110 foreign countries, and is now uninspected. Some countries will permit American inspectors to look over their plants if they are sending sizable amounts of fish to the USA, but the Food and Drug Administration hasn't enough funds to do the inspecting.

It even lacks sufficient inspectors to adequately check on the 2,200 fish processing plants and caneries which operate in interstate commerce in the United States. These plants are inspected only about once a year, if that often.

In addition, there are 1,500 intrastate processing plants and canneries not subject to federal inspection. State inspection in some states is lax or nonexistent.

Meanwhile fish have presented several health hazards, which on occasion have caused death or epidemics. One was the well-known case of Botulism which started from eating spoiled smoked salmon in Ohio and Michigan, and caused several deaths. Cases of hepatitis have also been traced to shellfish dredged from too near sewage outlets.

Finally, there is fish spoilage due to poor temperatures, causing salmonella or nausea.

Another problem has been the use of antibiotics to remedy fish spoilage. All of this has been impossible to check by the small staff of food and drug inspectors, even when they have jurisdiction.

FISHERMAN'S CHAMPION

There is also the question of inspecting 72,000 fishing vessels for health and sanitation.

To remedy this, the White House is drafting a tough fish inspection act giving more authority to the Food and Drug administration, arger staffs and federal jurisdiction over intrastate canneries and processing plants, unless and until individual states bolster their own inspection.

One interesting fact about the fish inspection proposal is that the champion consumers' guardian on Capitol Hill is long-time bachelor Sen. Warren Magnuson, who comes from one of the biggest fishing states, Washington. One of his best political friends and backers is Nick Bex, an old poker - playing pal of Harry Truman's.

Ignoring the opposition of the fishing industry, Magnuson is going to introduce the President's fish inspection bill, and will push it through his senate commerce committee.

He is convinced that, despite some protests, healthy fish will be the biggest boon to fishermen in the long run. Housewives who buy poor quality or spoiled fish are inclined not to buy it again.

Magnuson has been working with the Russians and the Japanese to protect American salmon, halibut, and the big fishing banks off both coasts of America. He will compile this with a fortnright fish inspection bill to revitalize the entire fishing industry.

LBJ AND BABIES

Unless he changes his mind at the last minute, President (grandfather) Johnson will make a strong appeal in his state of the Union Message tomorrow (Wed.) for a program to reduce infant mortality. He is alarmed over the shocking fact that the United States, though the fourth largest nation in the world, ranks 14th in the death of babies.

The President has told aides he will urge congress to take care of impoverished mothers and their newborn. His hope is to provide adequate care for the mothers during pregnancy and infants for their first year. Most infant mortalities occur, according to statistics, in these crucial first 12 months.

The appeal to do something about infant mortality will be only part of a renewed call for welfare programs for his great society. He is particularly eager to spur research on improving medicines and hospital care.

EXIT THE GOOD DOCTOR?

It looks as if Dr. James L. Goddard, well-intentioned food and drug administrator, might be talking himself out of a job.

First he got quoted around the country last summer as saying he wouldn't object if his daughter smoked marijuana; indicating that smoking pot was not harmful to high school students.

Later he made a prediction that the small family drugstore was on the way out -- not a happy remark for the vice-president of the United States. Hubert Humphrey, the nation's no. 1 druggist, was born over his family drugstore in Huron, S.D., and still owns part of it.

More recently, food and drug agents seized 16 million weight-reducing pills produced by Western Laboratories of Denver, despite the fact that the pills had been sold by Western Research for more than 30 years and manufactured under the regulations and inspection of FDA. The FDA has had labels in its possession for seven years bearing the exact ingredients which it now considers "dangerous to health when used in the frequency and duration prescribed, recommended and suggested in their labeling." This is the charge now leveled at Western Research by FDA district director Fred Lofsvold in Denver.

If the pills were suddenly found dangerous for fat-reducing, as now alleged, the question is why this recent development couldn't have been imparted to the drug officials instead of staging a spectacular 16-million-pill raid, with U.S. marshals.

Dr. Goddard is reported on his way out.

Cool Colors Make Hottest Spring Fashion News

ROME AP - Cool colors that is the hottest news from the Italian spring - summer fashion collections, in their fourth day of showings today.

Designer after designer is driving the point home. Frosty white and pastels appear to have been bleached even paler with chalk. This, rather than any drastic change in line, is the headlin hitter.

As always in the Italian collections, fabrics are big scene stealers.

Intricate intarsia work impressed buyers at Mila Schon. Inserts and appliques in flower shapes, circles, chevrons and undulating stripes and the fashion crowd gasping at their intricacy and impeccable workmanship. These motifs were used with beautiful discreation on suits and unlined coats in creamsmooth wools.

Colors were pale and melting -powdery gray, ice-cold blue and, of course, white.

Funnel necklines, yokes and short capes keet the eye up high on suits. Hip - length jackets were softly tailored and sometimes slackly belted.

As at Fashion House Forquet earlier in the day, two-tone dresses were popular with white collars, sleeves and yokes in contrast with another color.

Slubbed silks were in keeping with the Italian trend for nonshiny surfaces.

Antonelli's discotheque dresses rattled like bead curtains with flying hula skirts made from sequinned fringe. Harop Marx wigs were teased into frizzy bushes that screamed out for strokes of the brush.

Booklet Offers Hints On Home Plumbing Care

Minor repairs in your plumbing should be made promptly. A clogged drain, dripping faucet or leaking water closet valve not only grate on the nerves, they also cost you money. Many such problems can be corrected by a handy member of your family. Other repairs should be made only by a plumbing contractor and his journeymen, to avoid the possibility of cross-connections between your potable water supply and the waste lines.

A booklet titled "Plumbing Care and Repair" helps you tell the difference between jobs calling for a professional's services and those you can do yourself. It also contains dozens of tips on how to make simple repairs. The booklet is available for 25 cents from Plumbing - Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60601.

Stars Being Taught

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "They don't teach you to be a starlet. They teach you to be a star, and that's what I want to be."

That is the ambition of Lara Lindsay, and she is being helped toward her goal by the most intensive star-building program ever instituted in Hollywood—the 20th Century-Fox school for new talent.

For 10 years the film industry, out of economic necessity, ignored the grooming of new stars. Studios felt they could no longer employ and train dozens of young hopefuls, a few of whom might turn into stellar attractions. The result: as the established stars died or faded away, there were few new ones to take their places. Box-office stars became fewer in number and higher in cost.

With its return to prosperity, 20th Century-Fox realized the urgent need to replenish the talent pool. The Zanucks, father and son, established a program under the supervision of talent executives Owen McLean and Jack Bauer. Today a score of young hopefuls are enrolled in the compulsory curriculum. Universal also has a talent school, but attendance is voluntary.

Lara Lindsay is one of the most promising Fox students. The name sounds a bit artificial, and it is. She was born Gladys Jacobs in Chicago, started skating at an early age and ended up in the Icecapades and other shows. She married an interior designer, became mother of a son, now 4. When the marriage started to break up, she capitalized on her blue-eyed, auburn-haired beauty by doing commercials on television in Tucson, Ariz. Her pay: $15 per commercial.

Then it happened—one of those chance events upon which acting careers are built. The Paramount Western "El Dorado" came to Tucson and Lara got a job standing in for Charlene Holt. Coworkers encouraged her to come to Hollywood. She did.

Lara went through the heartbreaking routine of trying to interest an agent in presenting her to the studios. She finally obtained one, also a new name — Lara from "Dr. Zhivago," Lindsay from a brother— and a rearranged set of teeth.

The agent took her first to 20th Century-Fox, where talent executives were enough impressed to order a personality test on film— in which the hopeful answers questions on camera to determine whether the personality comes across. After a couple of readings in dramatic scenes, Lara was signed Dec. 12, 1966, to a term contract starting at $175 a week.

Her schooling began immediately.

"It's an intensive schedule, from 10 to 5 every day, five days a week," she explained. "And you must attend everything. If you have too many unexcused absences, your salary is reduced.

"But it doesn't make sense not to attend. We're getting the best schooling a performer could find in Hollywood, and we're paid for it. I couldn't possibly afford the kind of classes I get at the studio."

Interfaith Marriages Become Common Pattern

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) -- Interfaith marriages, once a rarity in past periods of ethnic and religious aloofness in America, have become a common pattern. And a new study shows the proportion of them still is rising.

Religious analysts see both advantages and disadvantages in the trend.

"All studied show that the intermarried have a high risk of divorce," says Dr. Victor D. Sanua, associate professor os psychology at New York's Yeshiva University, and author of a broad survey of the practice.

However, he adds, this drawback in noticeable chiefly in cases when one party lacks any firm religious commitment, rather than because of a clash between differing religious beliefs.

On the positive side, a recent Catholic - Presbyterian conference concluded that a marriage between a Catholic and Protestant can be a useful contribution toward a fuller graps of unity in the Christian faith.

"If two people of differing faiths can live together in deeplove and understanding, then we have something pointing to the great church of the future," said a conference spokesman, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Henry G. J. Beck, of Lyndhurst, N. J.

Children in mixed marriages, he added, should "become familiar with both traditions" of the parents, and while being reared clearly in one of them, should "be given a real reverence" for the other.

Dr. Sanua's research, drawing figures from a wide number of studies, indicate that the extent of interfaith marriages has increased steadily for more than two decades, and is expected to continue rising.

At present, he says, available statistics indicate an estimated "50 per cent of Catholics marry outside their faith. The percentage for Protestants seems to be about as high. For the Jewish group, it is approximately 17 per cent."

This constitutes a dramatic upswing, he commented, although no precise comparative figures are available for past periods. But a quarter century ago, he added, such a marriage could set neighbors talking.

"It was unusual," he said in an interview. But not anymore.

He said he doubted if the friendlier interreligious climate has stimulated the trend, adding that the main cause lies in the dissolving of old national ethnic lines, bringing Americans into generally "homogenized groups."

However, he notes, the proportion of intermarriages rises sharply in areas where one group is a small minority, in the midst of another overwhelmingly predominant group.

For example, the percentage of Catholic marriages to Protestants are much higher in the South, where Protestantism strongly predominates, while the Protestant intermarriage ratio rises steeply in heavily Catholic cities.

Similarly, Jewish intermarriages go up to 45 to 70 per cent in small cities and rural areas, where they are small minorities.

Dr. Sanua's report, entitled "Marriage Counseling: Psychology-Ideology," was edited by Dr. H. L. Silverman, of Seton Hall University, and issued by Charles Thomas publishers, of Springfield, Ill.

Kitchen Remodeling Will Exceed $3 Billion

More than $3 billion will probably be spent on kitchen remodeling next year, the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau says.

As you might expect, it's the lady of the house who makes the decision that it's time for remodeling. The main reasons are a lack of efficiency, a need for more cabinet or counter space and a need to re-arrange the kitchen to make room for desired appliances, such as an automatic dishwasher.

According to the Bureau, at least 40 million homes in the United States are over 10 years old. That's the age at which the typical homemaker decides her kitchen is outdated.

Among the popular new additions to remodeled kitchens are electric food waste disposers, dishwashers, two-bowl sinks, ranges with eye-level ovens and refirgerators, which have changed a great deal in the last decade.

Cool Colors Make Hottest Spring Fashion News

ROME AP - Cool colors that is the hottest news from the Italian spring - summer fashion collections, in their fourth day of showings today.

Designer after designer is driving the point home. Frosty white and pastels appear to have been bleached even paler with chalk. This, rather than any drastic change in line, is the headlin hitter.

As always in the Italian collections, fabrics are big scene stealers.

Intricate intarsia work impressed buyers at Mila Schon. Inserts and appliques in flower shapes, circles, chevrons and undulating stripes and the fashion crowd gasping at their intricacy and impeccable workmanship. These motifs were used with beautiful discreation on suits and unlined coats in creamsmooth wools.

Colors were pale and melting -powdery gray, ice-cold blue and, of course, white.

Funnel necklines, yokes and short capes keet the eye up high on suits. Hip - length jackets were softly tailored and sometimes slackly belted.

As at Fashion House Forquet earlier in the day, two-tone dresses were popular with white collars, sleeves and yokes in contrast with another color.

Slubbed silks were in keeping with the Italian trend for nonshiny surfaces.

Antonelli's discotheque dresses rattled like bead curtains with flying hula skirts made from sequinned fringe. Harop Marx wigs were teased into frizzy bushes that screamed out for strokes of the brush.

Booklet Offers Hints On Home Plumbing Care

Minor repairs in your plumbing should be made promptly. A clogged drain, dripping faucet or leaking water closet valve not only grate on the nerves, they also cost you money. Many such problems can be corrected by a handy member of your family. Other repairs should be made only by a plumbing contractor and his journeymen, to avoid the possibility of cross-connections between your potable water supply and the waste lines.

A booklet titled "Plumbing Care and Repair" helps you tell the difference between jobs calling for a professional's services and those you can do yourself. It also contains dozens of tips on how to make simple repairs. The booklet is available for 25 cents from Plumbing - Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60601.

Stars Being Taught

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "They don't teach you to be a starlet. They teach you to be a star, and that's what I want to be."

That is the ambition of Lara Lindsay, and she is being helped toward her goal by the most intensive star-building program ever instituted in Hollywood—the 20th Century-Fox school for new talent.

For 10 years the film industry, out of economic necessity, ignored the grooming of new stars. Studios felt they could no longer employ and train dozens of young hopefuls, a few of whom might turn into stellar attractions. The result: as the established stars died or faded away, there were few new ones to take their places. Box-office stars became fewer in number and higher in cost.

With its return to prosperity, 20th Century-Fox realized the urgent need to replenish the talent pool. The Zanucks, father and son, established a program under the supervision of talent executives Owen McLean and Jack Bauer. Today a score of young hopefuls are enrolled in the compulsory curriculum. Universal also has a talent school, but attendance is voluntary.

Lara Lindsay is one of the most promising Fox students. The name sounds a bit artificial, and it is. She was born Gladys Jacobs in Chicago, started skating at an early age and ended up in the Icecapades and other shows. She married an interior designer, became mother of a son, now 4. When the marriage started to break up, she capitalized on her blue-eyed, auburn-haired beauty by doing commercials on television in Tucson, Ariz. Her pay: $15 per commercial.

Then it happened—one of those chance events upon which acting careers are built. The Paramount Western "El Dorado" came to Tucson and Lara got a job standing in for Charlene Holt. Coworkers encouraged her to come to Hollywood. She did.

Lara went through the heartbreaking routine of trying to interest an agent in presenting her to the studios. She finally obtained one, also a new name — Lara from "Dr. Zhivago," Lindsay from a brother— and a rearranged set of teeth.

The agent took her first to 20th Century-Fox, where talent executives were enough impressed to order a personality test on film— in which the hopeful answers questions on camera to determine whether the personality comes across. After a couple of readings in dramatic scenes, Lara was signed Dec. 12, 1966, to a term contract starting at $175 a week.

Her schooling began immediately.

"It's an intensive schedule, from 10 to 5 every day, five days a week," she explained. "And you must attend everything. If you have too many unexcused absences, your salary is reduced.

"But it doesn't make sense not to attend. We're getting the best schooling a performer could find in Hollywood, and we're paid for it. I couldn't possibly afford the kind of classes I get at the studio."

Interfaith Marriages Become Common Pattern

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) -- Interfaith marriages, once a rarity in past periods of ethnic and religious aloofness in America, have become a common pattern. And a new study shows the proportion of them still is rising.

Religious analysts see both advantages and disadvantages in the trend.

"All studied show that the intermarried have a high risk of divorce," says Dr. Victor D. Sanua, associate professor os psychology at New York's Yeshiva University, and author of a broad survey of the practice.

However, he adds, this drawback in noticeable chiefly in cases when one party lacks any firm religious commitment, rather than because of a clash between differing religious beliefs.

On the positive side, a recent Catholic - Presbyterian conference concluded that a marriage between a Catholic and Protestant can be a useful contribution toward a fuller graps of unity in the Christian faith.

"If two people of differing faiths can live together in deep love and understanding, then we have something pointing to the great church of the future," said a conference spokesman, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Henry G. J. Beck, of Lyndhurst, N. J.

Children in mixed marriages, he added, should "become familiar with both traditions" of the parents, and while being reared clearly in one of them, should "be given a real reverence" for the other.

Dr. Sanua's research, drawing figures from a wide number of studies, indicate that the extent of interfaith marriages has increased steadily for more than two decades, and is expected to continue rising.

At present, he says, available statistics indicate an estimated "50 per cent of Catholics marry outside their faith. The percentage for Protestants seems to be about as high. For the Jewish group, it is approximately 17 per cent."

This constitutes a dramatic upswing, he commented, although no precise comparative figures are available for past periods. But a quarter century ago, he added, such a marriage could set neighbors talking.

"It was unusual," he said in an interview. But not anymore.

He said he doubted if the friendlier interreligious climate has stimulated the trend, adding that the main cause lies in the dissolving of old national ethnic lines, bringing Americans into generally "homogenized groups."

However, he notes, the proportion of intermarriages rises sharply in areas where one group is a small minority, in the midst of another overwhelmingly predominant group.

For example, the percentage of Catholic marriages to Protestants are much higher in the South, where Protestantism strongly predominates, while the Protestant intermarriage ratio rises steeply in heavily Catholic cities.

Similarly, Jewish intermarriages go up to 45 to 70 per cent in small cities and rural areas, where they are small minorities.

Dr. Sanua's report, entitled "Marriage Counseling: Psychology-Ideology," was edited by Dr. H. L. Silverman, of Seton Hall University, and issued by Charles Thomas publishers, of Springfield, Ill.

Kitchen Remodeling Will Exceed $3 Billion

More than $3 billion will probably be spent on kitchen remodeling next year, the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau says.

As you might expect, it's the lady of the house who makes the decision that it's time for remodeling. The main reasons are a lack of efficiency, a need for more cabinet or counter space and a need to rearrange the kitchen to make room for desired appliances, such as an automatic dishwasher.

According to the Bureau, at least 40 million homes in the United States are over 10 years old. That's the age at which the typical homemaker decides her kitchen is outdated.

Among the popular new additions to remodeled kitchens are electric food waste disposers, dishwashers, two-bowl sinks, ranges with eye-level ovens and refirgerators, which have changed a great deal in the last decade.

Missouri Lacks High School TV Coverage

By RON JAYNES
Standard Sports Editor

While sitting in one of Southeast Missouri's well known cafes after finals of one of the district tournaments, this writer couldn't help but hear a conversation at a nearby table about why Missouri television stations don't carry high school sports as do TV stations in other states.

That thought stimulated the curiosity of this writer and he set out to scrape up the following facts for you who might have tossed the thought around in your minds with a friend of yours.

In the conversation that filled the ears of this writer, the participants kept going back saying that radio stations do a great job in covering the high school sports in Missouri by doing the district tournaments and following a district team to the state.

The study was interesting for this writer, who had toyed with the thought himself many times before, but just didn't take time out from covering the high school sports scene to check into the situation until the weatherman halted action a couple of nights in the past two weeks.

Perhaps one reason for the radio stations doing a good job carrying the tournaments and single games is that the Missouri State High School Activities Association makes no charges for carrying the games as it does for television and another is that the majority of the radios advertising comes locally while much of TV's comes from national sponsors.

In nearby Illinois, stations bid on coverage rights, according to one local radio station announcer while newspapers pay also for entering and covering the state tournament.

That's what most of the talk was about. . . how radio stations carry the state tournament play and TV stations sometimes omit scores from its brief sports broadcasts.

One's first thought, or well my first thoughts of why TV stations in Missouri do not carry the local sports as do radio and newspapers would be (1) they are not interested, (2) they have trouble in obtaining sponsors for the events, or (3) the price of the state is too high.

But a check on the last situation seems small in amount to what a station or stations might sell it to its advertisers for. (The state policy on television rights will follow at the end of this article).

In talking to MSHSAA Executive Secretary Irvin A. Keller in Columbia, his reason why radio stations are not charged for broadcast rights was not given and was not asked after he stated that each station carrying regional and state tournament play signs an agreement to publicize the tournaments beforehand and broadcast three prepared statements about the association. It is sort of a swap out. . . with radio getting the broadcast rights for free publicity.

Keller said that his opinion why the state tournament play in any sport has never been broadcast, live or delayed over state TV stations is the stations problem with preempting or cancelliating evening programs to make room for the showing and the conflict with the games of one of the many professional teams in the state.

The policy of the association is not to go out and sell the TV rights. Its purpose is not to sell entertainment but to help in setting up and governing the state's high school activities, not only sports but band, speech and others.

Second is the state professional teams that tend to pressure the high schools for TV time.

Take Southeast Missouri. . . Our only area station carries few district high school basketball scores and many others across the state are the same way. . . but they do carry a full schedule of top college and professional sports.

Some of the thoughts brought up in the talk in the cafe was that TV stations cared little about the high school sports and that it would take a major advertiser to sponsor the event.

Both may be right, but the last statement seems to be the one to make the most sense. . . If as many people, who attended the state basketball tournaments last season, would write to their local TV stations or major sponsors one might just one of these days turn on his TV set and see and hear finals of a high school event.

Keller related that some six to eight years ago. . . Standard Oil company of Indiana approached the state for broadcast rights about the time the rules were set up. Everything seemed to satisfy the company except the charges of the telephone company. The program was dropped.

The attendance at the state basketball tournaments of 1966-67 set an all time attendance record with almost that many staying at home. . . and those at home would enjoy seeing the tournament in person or on TV.

A little attention should be given to high school activities and some needs to be taken away from so much professional play.

Your views, pro or con would be appreciated. . . drop your views to the Sports Department, 205 S. New Madrid, Sikeston, Mo. 63801.

--An enterprising Eastern high school basketball prospect sent Missouri University Coach Norm Stewart an informal scholarship application this week -- with a string attached.

The string actualy was an enclosure -- indicating the athlete's arm span.

"I held one end in each hand, with my arms fully extended -- and it still drooped," Stewart said.

"Then I gave the string to Roy Dewitz (assistant M. U. coach). He has real long arms, but when he tried the same thing, the string still sagged in the middle."

Stewart didn't indicate any followup action on the long-armed prospect. He couldn't help speculate, though, that the youngster might be effective in any zone defense.

Missouri Lacks High School TV Coverage

By RON JAYNES
Standard Sports Editor

While sitting in one of Southeast Missouri's well known cafes after finals of one of the district tournaments, this writer couldn't help but hear a conversation at a nearby table about why Missouri television stations don't carry high school sports as do TV stations in other states.

That thought stimulated the curiosity of this writer and he set out to scrape up the following facts for you who might have tossed the thought around in your minds with a friend of yours.

In the conversation that filled the ears of this writer, the participants kept going back saying that radio stations do a great job in covering the high school sports in Missouri by doing the district tournaments and following a district team to the state.

The study was interesting for this writer, who had toyed with the thought himself many times before, but just didn't take time out from covering the high school sports scene to check into the situation until the weatherman halted action a couple of nights in the past two weeks.

Perhaps one reason for the radio stations doing a good job carrying the tournaments and single games is that the Missouri State High School Activities Association makes no charges for carrying the games as it does for television and another is that the majority of the radios advertising comes locally while much of TV's comes from national sponsors.

In nearby Illinois, stations bid on coverage rights, according to one local radio station announcer while newspapers pay also for entering and covering the state tournament.

That's what most of the talk was about. . . how radio stations carry the state tournament play and TV stations sometimes omit scores from its brief sports broadcasts.

One's first thought, or well my first thoughts of why TV stations in Missouri do not carry the local sports as do radio and newspapers would be (1) they are not interested, (2) they have trouble in obtaining sponsors for the events, or (3) the price of the state is too high.

But a check on the last situation seems small in amount to what a station or stations might sell it to its advertisers for. (The state policy on television rights will follow at the end of this article).

In talking to MSHSAA Executive Secretary Irvin A. Keller in Columbia, his reason why radio stations are not charged for broadcast rights was not given and was not asked after he stated that each station carrying regional and state tournament play signs an agreement to publicize the tournaments beforehand and broadcast three prepared statements about the association. It is sort of a swap out. . . with radio getting the broadcast rights for free publicity.

Keller said that his opinion why the state tournament play in any sport has never been broadcast, live or delayed over state TV stations is the stations problem with preempting or cancelating evening programs to make room for the showing and the conflict with the games of one of the many professional teams in the state.

The policy of the association is not to go out and sell the TV rights. Its purpose is not to sell entertainment but to help in setting up and governing the state's high school activities, not only sports but band, speech and others.

Second is the state professional teams that tend to pressure the high schools for TV time.

Take Southeast Missouri... Our only area station carries few district high school basketball scores and many others across the state are the same way. . . but they do carry a full schedule of top college and professional sports.

Some of the thoughts brought up in the talk in the cafe was that TV stations cared little about the high school sports and that it would take a major advertiser to sponsor the event.

Both may be right, but the last statement seems to be the one to make the most sense. . . If as many people, who attended the state basketball tournaments last season, would write to their local TV stations or major sponsors one might just one of these days turn on his TV set and see and hear finals of a high school event.

Keller related that some six to eight years ago. . . Standard Oil company of Indiana approached the state for broadcast rights about the time the rules were set up. Everything seemed to satisfy the company except the charges of the telephone company. The program was dropped.

The attendance at the state basketball tournaments of 1966-67 set an all time attendance record with almost that many staying at home. . . and those at home would enjoy seeing the tournament in person or on TV.

A little attention should be given to high school activities and some needs to be taken away from so much professional play.

Your views, pro or con would be appreciated. . . drop your views to the Sports Department, 205 S. New Madrid, Sikeston, Mo. 63801.

Winter A Hardship To Animals

Winter means hardship to most Missouri animals, and this includes wild animals as well as those that live in barns and houses.

Men and their domestic animals are generally not well equipped to cope with really severe cold and snow. But man can build himself a house and heat it, can preserve and store food for winter, and can erect shelters for his animals.

Wild things, on the other hand, are often poor builders and most of them cannot preserve and stockpile food; but they are built to survive average winter weather without these abilities. They have protective fur or plumage and are armed to dig, scratch or run for food.

This winter became severe before 1968 was fully hatched. Temperatures dipped to near or below zero on New Year's Eve and January holds little promise of a heat wave.

Many Missourians -- once they had seen to their own comforts -- started thinking about wildlife. Some suggested spreading grain for quail; others felt sorry for rabbits. Songbird feeders were freshly stocked.

The fact is, however, that wild creatures fare quite well in the winter. They need the same things they need at any other time of the year -- food and shelter, preferably close together.

A cottontail may hole up when the mercury drops to zero, but who wouldn't? The cold won't keep him from foraging for some thing to eat, though. Chances are that the hunter who got out of his car an hour ago is more miserable than the rabbit who was out all night.

Quail roost in a circle at night, sharing their body heat with each other. During the day they may either roost or move about in search of food.

Food for wild things is not as abundant in the winter, but they usually will find enough to eat. It seldom helps, and often is dangerous, for men to put food out for wild animals. For one thing, they generally place the food for animals they are most worried about -like quail. It is often consumed by animals they don't care much about -- like crows. This can lead a man to give up.

If he gives up for this, or another, reason what happens to the quail who have learned to depend on his bounty?

Men often put quail food in dangerous places. A quail would never choose to eat dinner in an open field, away from escape cover. But if a man puts a pile of corn in such a place, hungry quail may go to it. They are then easy prey for other animals that like quail.

The weather has to get really severe before it kills much wildlife. Quail, for example, may not get enough to eat when an ice storm freezes seeds into unbreakable shells. A prolonged spell of sub-zero weather can kill the birds even if they have plenty of food. These hazards account for much of the annual mortality of quail -- that number of birds that will die each year whether they are hunted or not.

If wildlife must be fed by man, the best time to think about it is during planting seasons when food plots can be established. New Year's Day is too late to worry about it.

Like other wildlife, fish survive winter weather pretty well. Fish are not endangered by ice on lakes or farm ponds unless the ice has a heavy cover of snow. Even then if the ponds are properly built and maintained there is seldom a problem. Unusually heavy snow cover on the ice of a small pond can choke out oxygen - producing sunlight. But even here the danger is greatest in ponds that receive barnyard drainage or contain large amounts of decaying organic matter that consumes oxygen.

What can man do about the hazards of winter? Well, he can feed his dog, get his livestock indoors, put antifreeze in his car and turn his thermostate up a little more.

And he can resolve to plant that food plot and let the brush grow near it. It won't help this year's quail, but next year's crop will love him for it.

Full Slate Of High School Action Set For This Week

Southeast Missouri's high school basketball teams seem to be battling the weatherman nowadays instead of each other as old man winter has arrived and is playing around the time the district high school's teams are scheduled to do so.

For the past two weeks more games had to be postponed than were played. Some that have been re-scheduled from the first week of bad weather have been postponed for the second time.

But, cagers will try again this week to get in a game or two between the spells of bad weather as two tournaments along with a full slate of other regular scheduled activity dots the prep schedule.

With tournament action at Perryville and East Prairie kicking off the week, 32 high school teams pair up at 16 sites tonight in an attempt to get the ball bouncing once again, after some have had two weeks layoff.

Just about every team in the district has one and some have two games to make up or cancel between now and regional tournament time.

Highlighting the week is the Scott - Mississippi conference tournament at East Prairie, where many fans see a rematch of the Scott County Central - Oran clash of recent years. . .but which has been in the Braves favor so far this year with coach Kenneth Wages squad taking two wins over its arch-rival.

The two teams are seeded one and two in the tournament with the finals set for Saturday. Barring any upsets the two will meet for the third time this season for the championship which Oran has captured the last few seasons.

Conference clashes between the other district teams fill the schedule. Most teams fire up for their conference tournaments. Among those is Hayti North at North Pemiscot, New Madrid at Matthews and Dexter and Bloomfield.

The Dexter at Bloomfield clash is a non-conference tilt.

A real battle shapes up at Steele Thursday night when Delta C-7 calls in a Bootheel conference match.

Friday night's card is highlighted by the cross-town rival match of Howardville at Lilbourn in a New Madrid county conference meeting. Other top games include a SEMO conference showdown between Kennett and Poplar Bluff on the Mules floor. The two meet for the SEMO conference tournament earlier in the year and the small but aggressive Mules claimed the title over the top seeded Indians. Sikeston will be at Malden, Richland at Advance and Bloomfield at North Pemiscot to name a few of the top attractions of the 19-game Friday nigh schedule.

Saturday's card finds Salem at Poplar Bluff; Greenville at Neelyville and Portageville at North Pemiscot.

"Learning" Is Wildlife Theme

JEFFERSON CITY -- The 1968 National Wildlife Week theme will be "Learn to Live with Nature," emphasizing the need for more conservation education. National Wildlife Week this year will be March 17 through 23.

Missouri chairman for the observance of Wildlife Week is Ed Stegner, executive secretary of the Conservation Federation of Missouri. National Wildlife Week is sponsored by the National Wildlife Federation, of which the Missouri organization is a chapter. The Conservation Federation is an organization of conservation and sportsmen's clubs throughout the state.

National Wildlife Week is itself an educational observance with the purpose of promoting, in different years, various aspects of the total conservation picture.

The Missouri Department of Conservation, the official state wildlife and forestry management agency, conducts an extensive educational program with representatives throughout the state trained to work with teachers and school administrators in promoting and offering conservation in schools.

Aldrich Plan May Scatter Film Studios

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Does Robert Aldrich's purchase of a film studio portend the economic future of Hollywood? He thinks so, and he could be right.

The film town was startled this month when the producer-director announced he had sold out his 15 per cent interest in the profits of "the Dirty Dozen" to purchase a venerable movie lot not far from downtown Los Angeles.

"Everybody's entitled to a dream," Aldrich romanticized as he explained why he bought the one-stage Sutherland Studio which dates back to Mary Pickford films of 1912. His dream was to own the Aldrich Studio, and soon he will. Part of the purchase plan is construction of two more stages during the next two years, with another to follow later.

Robert Aldrich is a practical man, and it wasn't merely a dream that motivated him.

"I think this is the way the picture business is going to operate in the future," he explained in his office at MGM, where he recently filmed "The Legend of Lylah Clare." "The land that major studios are on will become so expensive that they will no longer be able to afford to function where they are. The business will scatter into a collection of satellite studios such as mine."

Aldrich has worked at most of the major companies with his independent films--"What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?" "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte," "Flight of the Phoenix." He is well aware of the economics involved.

"To get financing from the major companies, you have to agree to use their studio facilities," he said. "That means you must absorb their cost of operating that big studio, and at the best you're getting a bum deal. If they have planned well, and the studio has been busy all year, it's not so bad. But if the studio has been idle for long periods of time, you have to pay for their inefficiency."

The Aldrich plan is bold, but it may point the way to the future. It appears certain that major studios cannot continue on their present basis. This week there were no pictures shooting at MGM, 20th Century-Fox, Paramount or Columbia, and only one apiece at Universal and Warner Brothers. Meanwhile the overhead on these immense film factories continues.

Extension Council Installs

NEW MADRID -- The New Madrid county extension council held its first quarterly meeting Jan. 8.

Mrs. Nelson Lumsden, retiring president, installed the following new officers: Mrs. Henry Hulshof, Portageville, President; Mrs. Johnny McWilliams, Lilbourn, Vice-President; Mrs. J. V. New, Risco, Secretary; Mrs. John Huie, Gideon, Treasurer; Mrs. O. Burnett, Matthews, Mrs. Ralph Hubbard, Catron, Reporter.

Bert Robbins, New Madrid County extension director, gave a report "The 1968 Outlook for Family Living". According to the economists, higher prices for most things seems a certainty. There are several things that will cause the increase; wage increases that occurred during 1967, increased cost of raw materials, and increased profit margins will all be reflected in retail prices during the coming months.

Robbins told of the need of blood doners for the blood bank at the University of Missouri Hospital and Medical Center. There is a need for sponsoring groups to help secure blood donors.

Mrs. Huldhof, president, appointed a committee to meet with a countywide health committee to make plans to accomplish this.

Mrs. R. Hubbard reported that $42 had been sent to Campbell-Harrison House to help in the purchase of a washing machine. (Campbell-Harrison House is a cooperative residence home for college girls enrolled in home economics, who need help to reduce college living costs). The following clubs and individuals made the gift possible: East Gideon club ($5), Matthews club ($5), Risco club ($2), Baderville club ($3), Canalou club ($5), North Lilbourn Busy Bee club ($3), New Hope club ($5), New Madrid County Extension Club Council ($5), Miss Rebecca Nistendirk ($5), Mrs. R. Young Yanks Save Old Italian Art

By JEFF COX

FLORENCE, Italy—(NEA)—Old Italian art treasures and young Americans have more than a nodding acquaintance here, where the combination of an Italian Renaissance spirit and youthful American know-how are bringing many of man's greatest artistic and literary treasures literally back to life.

Just how long the restoration project will continue depends on the enthusiasm and the money of the Americans. Maybe they'll be back, maybe they won't.

The trouble started about a year ago when the Arno river, usually a quiet stream meandering through Florence, was swelled by flood waters to the point where muddy gruel covered priceless art treasures.

That's where Steve Haas, 24, an art history graduate student at New York University, got into the act along with dozens of other young Americans who turned up in Florence to help the Italians restore their precious works.

He got there through the Committee to Rescue Italian Art—known as CRIA—which was started by Prof. Bates Lowry of Brown University immediately after the flood. So far, CRIA has raised over $2 million to help the restoration, now scheduled to continue for at least another 20 years, though foreign support for the work may not continue nearly that long.

WHEN THE USUALLY CALM Arno River ran wild in Florence, Italy, priceless art treasures seemed doomed. But young Americans pitched in with enthusiasm and money to do something about the situation. (Life Magazine—David Lees © 1966, Time, Inc.)

When Steve got to Florence, most of the city had been cleaned up. But in the old portion, with buildings dating to early Renaissance times, and especially around the Church of Santa Croce, flood waters had soaked the wooden panels used by Florentine masters, crept beneath the paint of ancient frescoes and deposited ruinous salt, mottled the parchment pages of medieval manuscripts and buckled the veneers of thousands of pieces of classical furniture.

Steve was given the job of guide, and led visitors around the restoration sites. He lived with friends, and worked almost 24 hours a week. The rest of the time was his, and he used it to see Italy.

"The work in Florence is just beginning," says Steve, "they're only restoring the major pieces now."

And how is it working with the Italians? "They're very grateful for the help CRIA and other groups have given them," he says, "but you have to be careful not to hurt their feelings. After all, it's their art and their show."

Another CRIA volunteer is Noel Kunz, 25, a student of art conservation at the New York University Institute of Fine Arts. She's been trained to actually help restore the art works.

"My job is to help remove the facing from the paintings. Facing is a resin-treated paper flattened over the works to keep the paint from peeling off. We had to carefully remove this and any mud that was left," she says.

Not every aspect of the flood is bleak, though. Restorers and art historians, peeling back damaged layers of paint on frescoes, have found older, and often more brilliant, paintings underneath.

For instance, in the fifth-century baptistry of Il Duomo, the city's cathedral, water reached the hem of Donatello's St. Mary Magdalen, a priceless statue. Though a masterpiece, the statue had always been—in recorded memory—a rather ugly brown. When restoration was begun on the hem, workers found brilliant polychromed colors beneath.

Will Steve and Noel and others like them go back next year? No one knows how long enthusiasm in America will hold out for restoring art. If it wanes, CRIA might not be able to send more young volunteers for a summer of work and aid.

And without aid such as CRIA's and others', the 20-year project of restoration may take a century.

NEW YORK (AP)—Husbands who had welcomed the current paper dress trend as a solution to the endless assault on their currency have discovered how wrong they can be.

A paper doll who goes to a paper ball the New York society way can send the cost of a socalled disposable gown sky-rocketing when she's used to the elegant touches.

Sable seemed such a suitable touch for Charlotte Ford Niarchos and mink was right for Maggie McNellis Newhouse, while diamonds were the best friends of other paper-clad golden girls at the Paper Ball aboard the S. S. Michelangelo recently.

With immodest fortunes tied up and sewn onto gowns made of glossy or velour embossed or shredded paper who wants to toss them out?

Designer Bill Blass made a long caftan in a cheetah print with bead embroidery and that sable at the neckline and cuffs. Her sister Anne Ford Uzielli wore a wrap-around empire-waisted gown ruffly with white paper lace, set off nicely by glittering gems.

Certainly Henry Ford II's pretty daughters know the nice touches, both having attended a concentrated courses about the finer things conducted in Paris.

"He said I should keep this dress, but I'm sure I'll have to send back all this mink," said Mrs. Newhouse, who surveyed the long stretch of it that rounded her neck, marched down the front of her red velvet-like gown and bordered the hemline of the midi-length skirt. Gleaming red plastic boots worn with them finished off the Russian cossack look of her costume designed by Kasper.

"She's winter. I'm summer," said Ann (Mrs. Denniston) Slater, her gown in frothy layers of white eyelet daisy ruffles topped by a matching cape. Arnold Scaasi had conjured the garden of snowy flowers.

More flowers—some painted on, and some dimensional ones stitched on—were donned by Mrs. John Mosler wife of the safe-making family. Donald Brooks made it.

Young Wendy Vanderbilt's designer Sarmi gave her multi-colored paper dress a diagonally cut, ruffled hemline that was mini-high on the right side and floor length on the other.

"Is it really paper?" was the ice-breaking question of strangers as they encountered each other.

It was a valid question. The quality of paper dresses had improved a great deal since society had turned out for the last big Paper Ball in the area, this one in Hartford, Conn. more than a year ago.

Technically, most of the gowns worn by socialites were not really paper but an unwoved product made by Reemay of Du Pont which is close enough to it to warrant the license. Ordinarily, the designs from this product are of a simple nature, to keep production costs down.

When you hire top talent for custom designed paper dresses the costs are higher. In this instance, however, many of the designers made the dresses in the name of research, charity (The Policeman's Athletic League) and the kind of prestige that Fords and Vanderbilts and Moslers can give a designer and paper dresses.

Paper—or the Reemay version of paper—is still meant to be fun, to be worn a while and thrown away before it gets boring.

But if the trend turns to trimming it with sables and jewels then emptying the waste baskets may become a very profitable profession.

Young Yanks Save Old Italian Art

By JEFF COX

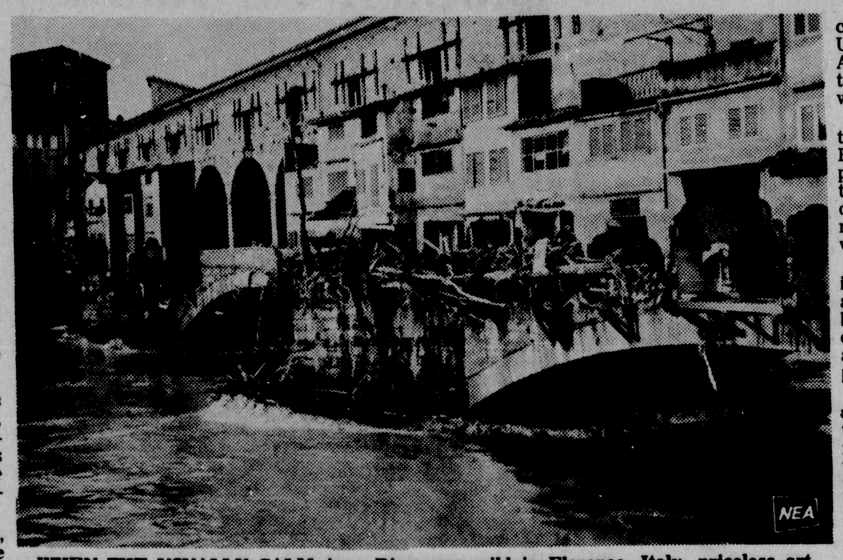

FLORENCE, Italy—(NEA)—Old Italian art treasures and young Americans have more than a nodding acquaintance here, where the combination of an Italian Renaissance spirit and youthful American know-how are bringing many of man's greatest artistic and literary treasures literally back to life.

Just how long the restoration project will continue depends on the enthusiasm and the money of the Americans. Maybe they'll be back, maybe they won't.

The trouble started about a year ago when the Arno river, usually a quiet stream meandering through Florence, was swelled by flood waters to the point where muddy gruel covered priceless art treasures.

That's where Steve Haas, 24, an art history graduate student at New York University, got into the act along with dozens of other young Americans who turned up in Florence to help the Italians restore their precious works.

He got there through the Committee to Rescue Italian Art—known as CRIA—which was started by Prof. Bates Lowry of Brown University immediately after the flood. So far, CRIA has raised over $2 million to help the restoration, now scheduled to continue for at least another 20 years, though foreign support for the work may not continue nearly that long.

WHEN THE USUALLY CALM Arno River ran wild in Florence, Italy, priceless art treasures seemed doomed. But young Americans pitched in with enthusiasm and money to do something about the situation. (Life Magazine—David Lees © 1966, Time, Inc.)

When Steve got to Florence, most of the city had been cleaned up. But in the old portion, with buildings dating to early Renaissance times, and especially around the Church of Santa Croce, flood waters had soaked the wooden panels used by Florentine masters, crept beneath the paint of ancient frescoes and deposited ruinous salt, mottled the parchment pages of medieval manuscripts and buckled the veneers of thousands of pieces of classical furniture.

Steve was given the job of guide, and led visitors around the restoration sites. He lived with friends, and worked almost 24 hours a week. The rest of the time was his, and he used it to see Italy.

"The work in Florence is just beginning," says Steve, "they're only restoring the major pieces now."

And how is it working with the Italians? "They're very grateful for the help CRIA and other groups have given them," he says, "but you have to be careful not to hurt their feelings. After all, it's their art and their show."

Another CRIA volunteer is Noel Kunz, 25, a student of art conservation at the New York University Institute of Fine Arts. She's been trained to actually help restore the art works.

"My job is to help remove the facing from the paintings. Facing is a resin-treated paper flattened over the works to keep the paint from peeling off. We had to carefully remove this and any mud that was left," she says.

Not every aspect of the flood is bleak, though. Restorers and art historians, peeling back damaged layers of paint on frescoes, have found older, and often more brilliant, paintings underneath.

For instance, in the fifth-century baptistry of Il Duomo, the city's cathedral, water reached the hem of Donatello's St. Mary Magdalen, a priceless statue. Though a masterpiece, the statue had always been—in recorded memory—a rather ugly brown. When restoration was begun on the hem, workers found brilliant polychromed colors beneath.

Will Steve and Noel and others like them go back next year? No one knows how long enthusiasm in America will hold out for restoring art. If it wanes, CRIA might not be able to send more young volunteers for a summer of work and aid.

And without aid such as CRIA's and others', the 20-year project of restoration may take a century.

If You Were The Judge

Operation Fails But Father Can't Collect

When the child labor laws failed to stop his numerous children from working him to death, Charley decided to undergo an operation that would put an end to his ability to have children.

After the operation, Charley felt marvelously relieved. That is, until he arrived him one night and was informed by his wife that she was going to have another "blessed event." Furious, Charley sued the doctor who had performed the operation on him for fraud, misrepresentation and everything else he could think of.

"It wasn't my fault," the doctor responded plaintively. "Every operation just isn't a success. Besides," he added while managing a nervous smile, "having kids is wonderful."

"Maybe for the Old Lady Who Lived in the Shoe," was Charley's answer, "But not for me. I didn't want any more kids and you said the operation was the answer. Since it didn't work, you're responsible."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the doctor pay Charley damages for fraud or misrepresentation?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that since there was no proof that the doctor either knew or should have known that the operation had failed, Charley could not claim that he had been a victim of fraud of misrepresentation. Nor was there any proof of the doctor's negligence. "And" concluded the judge in effect, "because Charley had a healthy child did not entitle him to damages."

(Based upon a 1964 Washington Supreme Court Decision)

Swimming Pool Bids Accepted

BLOOMFIELD -- Bids are being received by the Crowley Ridge Recreation Center, Inc. for the construction of a swimming pool. The estimated cost is $22,500. The swimming pool and a caretaker's house, which plans are now being prepared for, are to be completed by the opening of the 1968 swimming season.

It was also announced that the clubhouse is almost completed and the golf course is ready for seeding.

The new directors for the recreation center are president, D. L. Bess; vice president, Dean Cooper, secretary, J. C. Newcomer, and treasurer, John Davis.

Darrell Derryberry, Fred Wethington and Ronnie Cox will act as directors.

James Russell Lowell gave the name of "Battle Hymn of the Republic" to Julia Ward Howe's stirring hymn.

Safety Measures Prevent Toddler From Toppling

By POLLY CRAMER

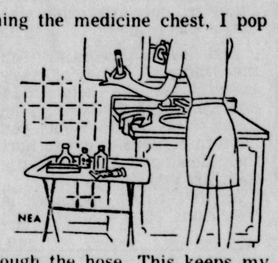

DEAR POLLY—I used a wide, soft piece of elastic screwed into the bottom of my grandchild's portable bassinet, under a pad, as an infant safety belt. The soft elastic, tied up and over the bundled infant, gives us some measure of protection should anything bump the car or should the bassinet tip for any reason. Also, a child's restaurant dining seat may be placed on the front seat of a car, with the car's seat belt drawn through the arms, to secure the active toddler. This will also allow him to be elevated enough to see out the window. In these days and times, we must be prepared for any eventually, as babies are too precious to risk in avoidable accidents.—MRS. E. F. C.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I have six lovely nylon aprons which I use for good. After washing them, I found it is impossible to iron them so that they are fit to use again. Is there a way to iron these aprons so they will be new-looking and not a wrinkled mess?—MRS. M. H.

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell the lady how to prepare old hose for stuffing pillows. Several I have stuffed are as good as if I had used feathers. I cut the heels, toes and any seams off first. Using large sharp scissors, I cut them very fine and they even look like dark feathers. Do not stuff them into the cases too loosely. This type of pillow washes well and is easy to handle.—MRS. J. S. B.

DEAR POLLY—When cleaning the medicine chest, I pop open a snack tray table to stand all the bottles and tubes on. They are also handy when cleaning the linen closet or refrigerator.

My washer is in the kitchen, so when I defrost the freezer I remove the agitator from the washer and put all the packages of frozen food in the washer. It keeps them cold, yet allows any moisture to drain off through the hose. This keeps my kitchen neater-looking during the entire defrosting procedure. —MARVA

DEAR POLLY—Recently I was unable to find new clothes-dampening bags, so I bought a pair of plastic pillow protectors. This way I have a dampening bag for white things and one for colored clothes. I bought two bags for the same price I normally have to pay for one.—MRS. A. S.

Ann Landers

Mother, 76, Told to Leave Her Crybaby Son, 55

Dear Ann Landers: I am a woman 76 years old. Last March my daughter-in-law had a heart attack and died suddenly. There were no children. When I went out for the funeral (1200 miles) my son begged me to stay and help him get over his heartache.

Ann, I have been here for 10 months. I am desperately homesick for my little apartment, my grandchildren and the life I used to lead. I do not like this climate and I work from morning till night -- washing, ironing, cooking and cleaning. His day lady quit when I moved in and he has not tried to replace her.

I have told my son three times that I want to go home but each time he sits down and cries like a baby and says I can't leave him. I have offered to keep house for him if he will come back West, but he says a man 55 years old can't start over.

Please tell me what to do. I don't want to add to this boy's problems. Lord knows he has had enough. -- LONESOME MOTHER

Dear Mother: This "boy" is 55 years old and it's time he grew up. My advice is to pack your bags and leave. Your son will get along without you--perhaps better. A woman 76 years of age is entitled to spend her remaining years in her own home, not as drafted servant for a 55-year-old crybaby.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm beginning to think that American girls are crazy and if I want to find a wife I will have to go to Japan. Here is my story:

I am 34 years old, respectable, make good money, am a neat dresser, good dancer, good swimmer and bowler, have money in the bank, most of my hair and all of my teeth. The problem is that I am 5'5" and every girl I ever wanted to get serious with has ditched me for a taller guy.

I have let it be known where I work that I am eager and eligible yet nobody has gone out of his way to fix me up a date. I've even written to matrimonial agencies and lonely hearts clubs. When the women answer, they want to know how tall I am.

Since you're the lady with the answers, I'd like one, please. -- SHORT CIRCUITED

Dear Circ: I have no answer, but I do have a question. How come a respectable, marriage-minded male who makes good money, is a neat dresser, good dancer, bowler, swimmer, with most of his hair and all of his teeth, has to beg friends to fix him up with blind dates and writes to matrimonial agencies and lonely hearts clubs?

Fellows get married every day and not all these guys are tall. The next letter will interest you since the man involved is six inches shorter than you.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the girl who is 5'11" and can't find an interesting guy who is tall enough for her. The shrimps seem to be the ones who make her feel alive mentally. I have a story that might point the girl in the right direction.

Aunt Nora was a divorcee with three sons to raise. She was no beauty and nearly 5'7". Aunt Nora met a man who was 4'11". They fell in love and married.

The two of them were a mighty odd-looking couple. People often turned around just to catch another glimpse of them. The whole family thought she was nuts.

It's been six years since they married and I have never known a happier couple. They have the baby girl they both wanted so much and the three boys are growing up to be wonderful men. What's more, the whole family adores "the runt" and feels Aunt Nora was lucky to get him. --WISER NOW

Dear Wiser: Thanks for letting us know where Aunt Nora's good sense led her. People who marry for appearance's sake learn quite promptly that those they were trying to impress were not worth the trouble.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents. . .If you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

If You Were The Judge

Operation Fails But Father Can't Collect

When the child labor laws failed to stop his numerous children from working him to death, Charley decided to undergo an operation that would put an end to his ability to have children.

After the operation, Charley felt marvelously relieved. That is, until he arrived him one night and was informed by his wife that she was going to have another "blessed event." Furious, Charley sued the doctor who had performed the operation on him for fraud, misrepresentation and everything else he could think of.

"It wasn't my fault," the doctor responded plaintively. "Every operation just isn't a success. Besides," he added while managing a nervous smile, "having kids is wonderful."

"Maybe for the Old Lady Who Lived in the Shoe," was Charley's answer, "But not for me. I didn't want any more kids and you said the operation was the answer. Since it didn't work, you're responsible."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the doctor pay Charley damages for fraud or misrepresentation?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that since there was no proof that the doctor either knew or should have known that the operation had failed, Charley could not claim that he had been a victim of fraud of misrepresentation. Nor was there any proof of the doctor's negligence. "And" concluded the judge in effect, "because Charley had a healthy child did not entitle him to damages."

Safety Measures Prevent Toddler From Toppling

By POLLY CRAMER

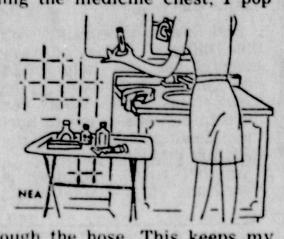

DEAR POLLY—I used a wide, soft piece of elastic screwed into the bottom of my grandchild's portable bassinet, under a pad, as an infant safety belt. The soft elastic, tied up and over the bundled infant, gives us some measure of protection should anything bump the car or should the bassinet tip for any reason. Also, a child's restaurant dining seat may be placed on the front seat of a car, with the car's seat belt drawn through the arms, to secure the active toddler. This will also allow him to be elevated enough to see out the window. In these days and times, we must be prepared for any eventually, as babies are too precious to risk in avoidable accidents.—MRS. Drooping Sales Stir Discontent

NEW YORK (AP) — This business year could be called the year of the salesman, for consumer reluctance very likely will test the wits of American salesmanship. Order takers will be in real trouble in 1968.

For many months now business expectation have often been more romantic than realistic. Though gains have been made in many retail areas, these gains have been disappointingly small. Some industrial sales have been disappointing also.

Increasingly there is heard the complaint that seven years of prosperity and seller markets have permitted once lean and spare sales forces to become flabby and dull, too comfortable to compete for new business, too placid to innovate.

During this process, the complainants state, some retailers have fallen badly out of touch with the consumer, failing not only to anticipate his moods but failing also to understand them. Their sales efforts are out of tune.

Sales executives aren't going to take this criticism much longer, nor can they, for the pressure is on them. This pressure will be vented downward, to marketing men, to sales manager to salesmen. That's where the buck stops, where the dollar comes in or else.

In executive offices all over America campaigns are now being devised to put zip into sales promotions, to pinpoint advertising, to innovate marketing methods, to excite and sharpen salespeople.

The emphasis very likely will be on a return to fundamentals: be optimistic, enthusiastic, helpful, especially in providing service. Above all, be informed, for some consumers today are knowledgeable as purchasing agents. They want facts rather than opinions.

"The consumer has found his voice and has started to use it," said Betty Furness, the President's special assistant for consumer affairs, in a talk this week.

"This voice is going to sound in other directions now," she said. "Not only has the consumer found his voice, he is also sharpening his memory."

In Miami Beach this week, William Luneburg, president of American Motors Corp., told car dealers they will have to do "the best sales job in history to overcome the 'wait and see' attitude developing among consumers."

"There is an increasing hesitancy to commit by the consumer," he said. Uncertainty about war, taxes, prices and the disturbed urban environment are affecting buying habits. "They pose a real challenge," he said.

Blaiberg and Daughter Hold Tearful Reunion

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP)— Heart transplant patient Philip Blaiberg had a tearfully happy reunion with his 20-year-old daughter Jill in Groote Schuur hospital today.

Miss Blaiberg arrived from Israel Monday night to see her father, who two weeks ago underwent the world's third human heart transplant. The girl is a student in Israel.

"I was a bit weepy," the smiling blonde girl said as she left the hospital. "He also had tears in his eyes. We grinned at each other like Cheshire cats. He looks marvelous. He's different— happy and healthy like the man I knew as a young girl."

Blaiberg's heart disease had aged him considerably, but his wife and doctors have said he looks years younger since a new heart was grafted into his body Jan. 2.

A hospital bulletin said Blaiberg's condition continues to be very satisfactory.

In Stanford, Calif., Mike Kasperak entered his 10th day with a new heart on an encouraging note, though remaining in critical condition.

"Kasperak's heart function continues to be satisfactory," said the latest Stanford University Medical Center Bulletin, issued Monday.

It noted moderate improvement following an operation Sunday to remove the gall bladder. Kasperak's liver function was "returning slowly to normal," physicians said, and the crisis with his liver may be over.

DESTRUCTION AT CHURCH from the full length dramatic film "The Restless Ones," produced by Evangelist Billy Graham, which will be shown at the Rex Theater Jan. 30-Feb. 1.

Billy Graham Film to Rex

"The Restless Ones," A motion picture produced by Evangelist Billy Graham, will be shown Jan. 30 - Feb. 1 at the Rex Theatre.

This feature-length film deals with the teen-age crisis. With a background setting provided by the 1963 Billy Graham Los Angeles Crusade, and woven into the story pattern, "The Restless Ones" offers an approach to social problems.

The Christian message comes through in the midst of a teen-age situation. The plot episodes highlight the opportunities facing the church.

Screen writer James Collier has brought into focus the contemporary plight of both teen-agers and parents. The script was produced by World Wide Pictures under the direction of Dick Ross.

New Program Helps Hard of Hearing

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — The curly haired 3-year-old boy watched closely as his mother mixed flour in a bowl on the kitchen table.

"Let's make a cake," she tells the youngster in carefully distinct syllables.

The mother repeats the words three times as the boy gazes intently at her face. At last he grins and chirps, "Cake."

An ordinary domestic scene? Not quite.

The child is almost totally deaf, and the two - story frame house is not theirs but a parent-home clinic established by the University of Kansas Medical Center.

One of four such projects across the nation financed by federal funds, the house is used to show parents in a familiar atmosphere how to help teach children with impaired hearing.

"We tried for years to tell parents in our offices how to do it, but it just didn't work out very well in many cases," explained Dr. June Miller, audiologist and director of the medical center's hearing and speech department.

"In a home situation, the parents can see clearly how and what they must do to help. We're very enthusiastic about it."

Established only a few months ago, the program involves 31 youngsters with varying degrees of hearing loss. Some of the children also have visual problems, are slow learners or have other handicaps.

Most of the boys and girls are under 3. Experts would like to begin the training at ages as early as 6 months, or as soon as a baby is known to have impaired hearing.

A hearing clinician works with the mother or father— often both— to coach them on helping the child understand others and ultimately learn to speak. Parents bring their child on regular visits to the home center until the youngster is ready to enroll in a special preschool program.

"The big problem is getting the parents to simply talk to the child of something that interests him— anything to get the child to look at them," Dr. Miller explained.

"Adults should talk in a normally loud voice, often and meaningfully to draw the child's attention."

When they first come to the home center, some of the deaf youngsters seldom look at their parents when the latter speak. They live in a silent world of their own.

But in surroundings familiar to both of them, parent and child are shown how to communicate while playing games or performing routine household tasks.

"It's a lot of work," said one mother.

"You've got to keep repeating the same thing over and over until she understands it. But I've learned.

"Now at home when Mary is around I make a point of explaining everything I'm doing. It's amazing how quickly they pick things up."

The home center uses a television videotape device to film parents working with their children. The film is replayed immediately while the instructor points out how to improve the lesson.

Dr. Miller noted although about four of every 100 children have hearing problems and one of 300 suffers severe impairment, there are still a lot of misconceptions about deafness.

Some adults forbid their children to play with deaf youngsters, because they're afraid the disability is catching.

Others are ashamed of their child's hearing problem, believing it to be divine retribution for sins of the parents or even grandparents.

Drooping Sales Stir Discontent

NEW YORK (AP) — This business year could be called the year of the salesman, for consumer reluctance very likely will test the wits of American salesmanship. Order takers will be in real trouble in 1968.

For many months now business expectation have often been more romantic than realistic. Though gains have been made in many retail areas, these gains have been disappointingly small. Some industrial sales have been disappointing also.

Increasingly there is heard the complaint that seven years of prosperity and seller markets have permitted once lean and spare sales forces to become flabby and dull, too comfortable to compete for new business, too placid to innovate.

During this process, the complainants state, some retailers have fallen badly out of touch with the consumer, failing not only to anticipate his moods but failing also to understand them. Their sales efforts are out of tune.

Sales executives aren't going to take this criticism much longer, nor can they, for the pressure is on them. This pressure will be vented downward, to marketing men, to sales manager to salesmen. That's where the buck stops, where the dollar comes in or else.

In executive offices all over America campaigns are now being devised to put zip into sales promotions, to pinpoint advertising, to innovate marketing methods, to excite and sharpen salespeople.

The emphasis very likely will be on a return to fundamentals: be optimistic, enthusiastic, helpful, especially in providing service. Above all, be informed, for some consumers today are knowledgeable as purchasing agents. They want facts rather than opinions.

"The consumer has found his voice and has started to use it," said Betty Furness, the President's special assistant for consumer affairs, in a talk this week.

"This voice is going to sound in other directions now," she said. "Not only has the consumer found his voice, he is also sharpening his memory."

In Miami Beach this week, William Luneburg, president of American Motors Corp., told car dealers they will have to do "the best sales job in history to overcome the 'wait and see' attitude developing among consumers."

"There is an increasing hesitancy to commit by the consumer," he said. Uncertainty about war, taxes, prices and the disturbed urban environment are affecting buying habits. "They pose a real challenge," he said.

Blaiberg and Daughter Hold Tearful Reunion

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP)— Heart transplant patient Philip Blaiberg had a tearfully happy reunion with his 20-year-old daughter Jill in Groote Schuur hospital today.

Miss Blaiberg arrived from Israel Monday night to see her father, who two weeks ago underwent the world's third human heart transplant. The girl is a student in Israel.

"I was a bit weepy," the smiling blonde girl said as she left the hospital. "He also had tears in his eyes. We grinned at each other like Cheshire cats. He looks marvelous. He's different— happy and healthy like the man I knew as a young girl."

Blaiberg's heart disease had aged him considerably, but his wife and doctors have said he looks years younger since a new heart was grafted into his body Jan. 2.

A hospital bulletin said Blaiberg's condition continues to be very satisfactory.

In Stanford, Calif., Mike Kasperak entered his 10th day with a new heart on an encouraging note, though remaining in critical condition.

"Kasperak's heart function continues to be satisfactory," said the latest Stanford University Medical Center Bulletin, issued Monday.

It noted moderate improvement following an operation Sunday to remove the gall bladder. Kasperak's liver function was "returning slowly to normal," physicians said, and the crisis with his liver may be over.

New Program Helps Hard of Hearing

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — The curly haired 3-year-old boy watched closely as his mother mixed flour in a bowl on the kitchen table.

"Let's make a cake," she tells the youngster in carefully distinct syllables.

The mother repeats the words three times as the boy gazes intently at her face. At last he grins and chirps, "Cake."

An ordinary domestic scene? Not quite.

The child is almost totally deaf, and the two - story frame house is not theirs but a parent-home clinic established by the University of Kansas Medical Center.

One of four such projects across the nation financed by federal funds, the house is used to show parents in a familiar atmosphere how to help teach children with impaired hearing.

"We tried for years to tell parents in our offices how to do it, but it just didn't work out very well in many cases," explained Dr. June Miller, audiologist and director of the medical center's hearing and speech department.

"In a home situation, the parents can see clearly how and what they must do to help. We're very enthusiastic about it."

Established only a few months ago, the program involves 31 youngsters with varying degrees of hearing loss. Some of the children also have visual problems, are slow learners or have other handicaps.

Most of the boys and girls are under 3. Experts would like to begin the training at ages as early as 6 months, or as soon as a baby is known to have impaired hearing.

A hearing clinician works with the mother or father— often both— to coach them on helping the child understand others and ultimately learn to speak. Parents bring their child on regular visits to the home center until the youngster is ready to enroll in a special preschool program.

"The big problem is getting the parents to simply talk to the child of something that interests him— anything to get the child to look at them," Dr. Miller explained.

"Adults should talk in a normally loud voice, often and meaningfully to draw the child's attention."

When they first come to the home center, some of the deaf youngsters seldom look at their parents when the latter speak. They live in a silent world of their own.

But in surroundings familiar to both of them, parent and child are shown how to communicate while playing games or performing routine household tasks.

"It's a lot of work," said one mother.

"You've got to keep repeating the same thing over and over until she understands it. But I've learned.

"Now at home when Mary is around I make a point of explaining everything I'm doing. It's amazing how quickly they pick things up."

The home center uses a television videotape device to film parents working with their children. The film is replayed immediately while the instructor points out how to improve the lesson.

Dr. Miller noted although about four of every 100 children have hearing problems and one of 300 suffers severe impairment, there are still a lot of misconceptions about deafness.

Some adults forbid their children to play with deaf youngsters, because they're afraid the disability is catching.

Others are ashamed of their child's hearing problem, believing it to be divine retribution for sins of the parents or even grandparents.
